

MEDIEVAL LAUGHTER AND THEATRE:
THE CASE OF SOME SOTTIES AND FARCES IN THE RECUEIL TREPPEREL
AND THE RECUEIL COHEN

Andreea Marculescu

In analyzing the nature of laughter in comic theatre from the end of the fifteenth century and the beginning of the sixteenth century—that is, the farces and the sotties—historians of medieval theatre have underlined the highly satirical character of these texts, the object of which was to critique the period's social, political, and ecclesiastical life—hence the various ordinances authorities such as the king, the Parliament, the Church, and the colleges (Felibien and Lobineau 634) issued against the actors and their plays.¹ In other words, the laughter in the sotties and farces has, by and large, been interpreted as the result of an ongoing interplay between censorship, imposed by the authorities, and “freedom of speech,” allegedly granted by the power institutions to the authors and performers of these texts (Arden 65–137). Or, to use Jean-Claude Aubailly's terms, “tout dans ce théâtre engagé qu'est la sottie, témoigne d'un contexte de lutte, attaque et défense, jusqu'au rire qu'elle fait naître et qui, plutôt qu'un rire franc exprimant la plénitude, est un rire grimaçant et caustique” (442).

Nevertheless, one might point out that the phenomenon of laughter in general, and of medieval laughter in particular, can be understood not solely as an ironic reaction toward a particular event, character, or social group but also as a larger heterogeneous discourse disseminated by different institutions and adopted, adapted, negotiated, or contested by various social segments and/or individuals according to their needs and background. In this sense, medievalists such as Jacques Le Goff (probably the first historian to take laughter seriously and to integrate it within the field of history and social sciences), Teodor Baconsky, Sophia Menache, Jeannine Horowitz, Felice Moretti, and, more recently, Carla Casagrande (177–93) have shown that laughter, both as discourse and praxis, played a considerable role in the consciousness and daily life of medieval people.² An irrefutable proof of such a state of affairs is that, even if no medieval treatise were dedicated to laughter per se, reflexive and/or normative thoughts on the subject of laughter were abundant in texts produced within both ecclesiastic and lay milieus. One could thus distinguish a consistent range of theoretical attitudes toward laughter and, at the same time, distinct types of laughter and ways of “performing” it that corresponded to different social categories. In short, by the period 1490–1521 (the time frame during which the Recueil Trepperel and the Recueil Cohen containing the Parisian farces and sottie were printed), a genuine “culture” of laughter, with its
