Frederick Kiesler:

Frederick Kiesler 1890-1965 Frederick Kiesler, 1997 Frederick Kiesler Shirley Haines-Cooke, 2009-03-26 The material for this book has been taken from the 2006 thesis Frederick Kiesler's Art of This Century in New York 1942-1947 in the Context of the Twentieth Century Art Museum. The prime objective was to establish why so few people remember Art of This Century which Kiesler designed for Peggy Guggenheim in 1942 and she ruthlessly closed in 1947. A second aim was to investigate why there has been so much research carried out on the Gallery when it was acknowledged as a work of art in its own right at the time of opening. Indeed in 2004 Thomas Krens the Guggenheim Foundation's director expressed concern that due to the lack of research it might slip into oblivion. Such a statement raises questions as to why it has taken the Guggenheim Foundation over half a century to resurrect Art of This Century in the form of two exhibitions held in Frankfurt and Venice or instigate its own research. The book opens with an historical account of the development of the modern art museum as well as an overview of Kiesler's life and multidisciplinary oeuvre. His association with selected contemporary architectural theorists and architects is looked at to establish whether they had any influence on his eclectic thinking. This is followed by a summary of Kiesler's manifesto On Correalism and Biotechnique: A Definition of a New Approach to Building Design 1937-1939. The main body of the work is a detailed description of Art of This Century. The notion that Kiesler's innovative theories and designs might be better understood in a twenty-first century architectural context is finally explored. This book finally restores Frederick Kiesler to his rightful place in the history of twentieth-century art and architecture. By a careful analysis of his sometimes fraught collaboration with the mercurial Peggy Guggenheim Haines Cooke uncovers the fascinating story of Kiesler's ground-breaking new vision for the display of abstract art rendered all the more poignant by its significant yet largely subliminal influence on much of the best in recent museum and gallery architecture. Dr Jonathan Hale, University of Nottingham. Frederick J. Kiesler Frederick Kiesler, 1996 One of the most creative artists of our century, Frederick Kiesler worked from the 1920s onwards as an architect, stage designer and environmental artist. His best-known works are still the Endless House project, the design of Peggy Guggenheim's Art of this Century Gallery in New York and the Shrine of the Book, a sanctuary for the Dead Sea Scrolls in Jerusalem. Kiesler was also a prolific writer on design, architecture and creativity. His ideas of a total theater of endless architecture and of sculpture inspired by organic forms have been a rich source of inspiration for subsequent generations of artists. Even 30 years after his death, his original shrewd thinking lends his texts freshness reflecting the temperament of a man who worked intensely and persistently on the project of a modern art that would not exhaust itself in rationalism and functionalism. Although during his lifetime he was only well-known among artists and architects, Kiesler can be numbered together with Duchamp among the most important innovators of art after 1900. His work is currently undergoing a critical resistance by architects and art historians who will welcome this volume of writings. The selection combines writings from every branch of art and a number of journal entries as well as other unpublished texts.
