

and the slashed appropriation is but rarely approved with the idea of doing a good job. Good administration is too often taken to involve the saving of money, instead of the proper handling of the work to be done. Perhaps, in the controversy over appropriations, if the medical profession manifested its interest in attempting to secure proper financial support for the Board, it would be rendering an important public service. It may be said that, under the statute, the responsibility of the Board in the matter of the practice of medicine by unregistered persons has a very limited scope, namely investigation, which the Board can carry out almost not at all, and the reporting of "the same to the proper prosecuting officers," who do the real investigating.

The committee deserves great credit for directing attention to the situation which it has described and for the admirable restraint of its comment. It might be interesting to hear from the Board of Registration in Medicine. In addition, the recommendation of the committee relative to the registration of all members of the Society with their respective town and city clerks should be closely followed.

HARVEY CUSHING'S SEVENTIETH BIRTHDAY PARTY

ON April 8, 1939, there gathered in New Haven, Connecticut, most of the members of the Harvey Cushing Society, a junior group of neurosurgeons, and many friends of Dr. Harvey Cushing to celebrate his seventieth birthday. To record the events of this party a small volume, Harvey Cushing's Seventieth Birthday Party (Springfield, Illinois: Charles C Thomas, 1939), has been issued, which contains speeches given at the dinner and various letters and tributes. Of particular interest are the remarks made by Dr. W. W. Francis, of the Osler Library in Montreal, reviewing his early association with both Osler and Cushing in Baltimore, and the touching comments of Dr. Cushing himself. There are many tributes from friends all over the world and, from old patients, letters sent to Dr. Cushing in grateful recognition of what he had done to ameliorate their symptoms. Notes of appreciation that have appeared in various medical journals are also appended, as well as "Notes on the Formative Period of a Neurological Surgeon," giving excerpts from his case records at the Massachusetts General Hospital and an estimation of his life as a house-pupil. The book is beautifully printed and contains some fine illustrations including one of the members of the Harvey Cushing Society, one of the dinner gathering, and plates taken from the case records of the Massachusetts General Hospital. There is also a reproduction of a crayon portrait of Dr. Cushing, done by Mr. Deane Keller, of New Haven, in 1939.

This volume will be welcomed by a large group of friends and associates of the late Dr. Cushing, as well as by many patients whose lives were saved by his efforts. The edition is limited, there being only 150 copies on special rag paper and a somewhat larger number on ordinary paper. The volume is a companion book to A Bibliography of the Writings of Harvey Cushing (Springfield, Illinois: Charles C Thomas, 1939). The latter was prepared on the occasion of Dr. Cushing's seventieth birthday by the Harvey Cushing Society and is already out of print, and one has little doubt but that the present volume will enjoy the same popularity. This in itself will form a fitting tribute to one of America's greatest physicians.

MEDICAL EPONYM

BELL'S PALSY

Bell's palsy and the respiratory nerve of Bell were described by Charles Bell (1774-1842) in a communication read July 12, 1821, by Sir Humphry Davy before the Royal Society of London, entitled "On the Nerves: Giving an account of some experiments on their structure and functions, which lead to a new arrangement of the system." This appears in the Philosophical Transactions of the Royal Society of London for that year.

After describing the "respiratory nerve of the face, being that which is called the portio dura of the seventh" and detailing his experiments, he says:

We have proofs equal to experiments, that in the human face the actions of the muscles which produce smiling and laughing are a consequence of the influence of this respiratory nerve. . . .

Cases of this partial paralysis must be familiar to
