Hattie McDaniel Jill Watts, 2005-09-27 Hattie McDaniel is perhaps bestknown for her performance as Mammy the sassyfoil to Scarlett O Hara in Gone With the Wind one of Hollywood's most revered and controversial films McDaniel's Oscar win raised hopes that the entertainment industry was finally ready to create more respectful multidimensional roles for blacks But under the aegis of studio heads eager to pleaseSoutherners screenwriters kept churning out rolesthat denigrated the African American experience Where McDaniel's stature and popularity should have increased after Selznick's masterpiece cameout as was the case for her white counterparts hersdeclined as an increasingly politicized black audience turned against her I d rather play a maid than be amaid is how McDaniel answered her critics Yet herflippant response belied a woman whose hardscrabblebackground rendered her emotionally conflicted about the roles she accepted. Here at last in a finely tuned biography by Jill Watts is her story Watts a highly praised researcher and writer shares little known aspects of McDaniel s life fromher dealings with Hollywood's power brokers and black political organizations to her successful civilrights battle to integrate a Los Angeles neighborhood revealing a woman hailed by Ebony as anachiever of more firsts in Hollywood than anyother black entertainer of her time Hattie McDaniel Jill Watts, 2005 African American Actresses Charlene B. Regester, 2010-06-14 Nine actresses from Madame Sul Te Wan in Birth of a Nation 1915 to Ethel Waters in Member of the Wedding 1952 are profiled in African American Actresses Charlene Regester poses questions about prevailing racial politics on screen and off screen identities and black stardom and white stardom She reveals how these women fought for their roles as well as what they compromised or didn t compromise Regester repositions these actresses to highlight their contributions to cinema in the first half of the 20th century taking an informed theoretical historical and critical approach McDaniel Jill Watts, 2007-02-06 Hattie McDaniel is best known for her performance as Mammy the sassy foil to Scarlett O Hara in Gone with the Wind Though the role called for yet another wide grinned subservient black domestic McDaniel transformed her character into one who was loval yet subversive devoted yet bossy. Her powerful performance would win her the Oscar for Best Supporting Actress and catapult the hopes of Black Hollywood that the entertainment industry after decades of stereotypical characters was finally ready to write more multidimensional fully realized roles for blacks But racism was so entrenched in Hollywood that despite pleas by organizations such as the NAACP and SAG and the very examples that Black service men were setting as they fought against Hitler in WWII roles for blacks continued to denigrate the African American experience So rather than see her stature increase in Hollywood as did other Oscar winning actresses Hattie McDaniel continued to play servants And rather than see her popularity increase her audience turned against her as an increasingly politicized black community criticized her and her peers for accepting degrading roles I d rather play a maid then be a maid Hattie McDaniel answered her critics but her flip response belied a woman who was herself emotionally conflicted about the roles she accepted but who tried to imbue each Mammy character with dignity and nuance
