musicians who formed a band they named Sanguma These Melanesian artists heard an imagined future and performed it during a socially and politically critical time for the region They were united under one goal to create a sound that represented the birth of a new sovereign and distinctly Melanesian nation and to express their values identities and cosmology through their music and performance Sanguma s experimental music sounded the complex expectations and pressures of their modern nation and helped to steer its postcolonial journey through music In Hearing the Future Australian ethnomusicologist Denis Crowdy documents and analyzes the music and activities of the Sanguma band arguing that their music was a vital form of cultural expression in sync with sociopolitical change then taking place in PNG Drawing from rock jazz and nascent world music influences Sanguma reached audiences far from their home nation introducing the world to modern music Melanesia style with its fusion of old and new local and global Performances ranged from ensembles of Melanesian log drums garamuts to extended songs and improvisations involving electric guitars synthesizers saxophone trumpet bamboo percussion panpipes and kuakumba flutes The band sang in a variety of local vernacular languages as well as in Tok Pisin and English To further emphasize their ancestral style the musicians wore decorative headdresses and body decoration from all around the nation along with distinctive pants featuring indigenous designs As the optimism of the early years of the nation faded due to harsh economic and social realities and as an increasingly commercial popular music scene came to dominate public music culture tensions between a once heard future and the sounding present emerged Continuing a theoretical trajectory in ethnomusicology Crowdy explores the role of music in imagining constructing and representing national and regional identity The analysis reveals inherent tensions between distinctly Melanesian ideals and the complexities in navigating the realities of local neoliberal capitalism
