Personal Safety for Social Workers Pauline Bibby, 2017-07-05 This book is aimed at employers managers and staff in social work agencies Historically there has been a slowness to acknowledge the risks which social workers routinely face and some employers have adopted a reactive approach waiting for incidents to occur before taking action. They are thus placed in the position of having to make policy on the hoof and at a time of crisis. Support to staff who have been attacked has been patchy and in some instances sadly lacking. The absence of agreed procedures for dealing with violent attacks can leave the staff concerned, feeling unsupported, anxious and stressed. Social work staff in their turn may have experienced feelings of guilt when they have been unable to prevent aggression or assault; at best they may lack confidence in the level of understanding and support their line managers will show and at worst they may feel that they will be blamed for the incident. As a result, there is a tendency towards under-reporting violent acts. For these reasons, a joint approach to the problem is urged which involves social workers, support staff and managers. Personal Safety for Social Workers examines the special issues which social workers and their employers need to address. Part 1 reviews some of the information now available about violence in social work settings and within the context of violence in society at large. The respective roles and responsibilities of employers and employees are discussed and guidance offered on developing a workplace personal safety policy and on the steps which will need to be taken for effective implementation. Advice is given on developing procedures for reporting violent incidents and for providing after care to staff who have been on the receiving end of violence. This section of the book also looks at the ways in which the design and management of the workplace can enhance personal safety and provides guidelines to social workers on the issues to consider when working away from the normal work base. Part 2 contains detailed personal safety guidelines for use by individual social workers in a variety of work situations. Part 3 addresses training issues and provides a number of sample training programmes. A Reference Section gives information about further reading, training materials and sources of further help, advice and information. The message of this book is that proper attention to risk can reduce both the incidence of aggression and its development into violent acts. Preventive action can have the dual effect of protecting staff and also of providing quality services in a more sensitive way to social work clients.

Mutual and Co-operative Approaches to Delivering Local Services. Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Communities and Local Government Committee, 2012-12-06. This report finds that efforts by the Cabinet Office to promote the development of employee owned cooperatives must be married more effectively to the work of DCLG to deliver localism reforms before mutual models of local service delivery can flourish. In its report the CLG Committee concludes that a number of significant barriers must be removed. Advice Government and local government itself should provide off the shelf models and guidance to reduce confusion and risks that deter local authorities currently from considering using mutual or co operative models for service delivery Leadership co ordination between the Government s Mutuals Support Programme the DCLG and the Local Government Association must be improved to gather and disseminate evidence on the operation of mutuals and co operatives in delivering local services Financing Government must do more to inform and educate financial institutions about lending to mutuals and co operatives and it must examine tax support for mutuals and co operatives Accountability all new organisations must remain accountable to the local Council usually through a contract and be transparent in their operations Through commissioning and oversight processes authorities must prevent services from fragmenting and protect the operation and ownership of local public assets Procurement rules must be drafted to confer maximum flexibility in tendering for services so that mutuals and co operatives can compete fairly with large companies and in house providers
