Kamehameha regaling him with a parade chants and leis every Kamehameha Day June 11 He meets a North Kohala volunteer who decides to paint the statue s sash after respectfully consulting with kahuna Hawaiian spiritual leaders and the statue itself A veteran of public art conservation Wharton had never before encountered a community that had developed such a lengthy personal relationship with a civic monument Going against the advice of some of his peers and ignoring warnings about going native Wharton decides to involve the people of Kapa au in the conservation of their statue and soon finds himself immersed in complex political social and cultural considerations including questions about representations of the Native Hawaiian past Who should decide what is represented and how And once a painting or sculpture exists how should it be conserved The Painted King examines professional authority and community involvement while providing a highly engaging and accessible look at activist conservation at work wherever it may be found Hawaii Magazine ,2006
