Borough Council,1990 Town Planning George Cadbury,1915 Town Planning ,1925 Valued Environments John R. Gold,Jacquelin Burgess,2019-03-21 First published in 1982 People care about places Inhabitants demand more participation in the changes proposed for their local environments activists urge greater protection of countryside and natural environments decision makers feel threatened by the antagonism aroused by their powers and plans The essays in this book have been drawn together to discover what lies behind these expressions of concern and discontent Valued environments are places for which people feel commitment and affection places which support a sense of personal identity and well being The authors explore the character and constituents of valued environments asking how our experiences of environments may be enhanced What is the impact of environmental change How can the future be accommodated in both rural and urban environments without destroying their essential qualities The reader will find substantive evidence from case studies of environments valued by inhabitants and outsiders which answer these questions Examples are taken from wilderness areas fenland market towns and large cities commercial streets and residential neighbourhoods environments of the past and those imagined in science fiction The essays are united in their focus on the meaning of places and landscapes The subtle but highly significant role of valued environments is examined thoroughly in the book It will be of interest to all who care deeply about their surroundings reflecting perhaps some of their own experiences as well as conveying information about the environmental experiences of others Students of geography environmental planning and conservation should also find the book directly relevant to their interests in man environment relationships Planning ,2002 The Architect ,1923
The Genesis of Modern British Town Planning William Ashworth,2024-11-01 First published in 1954 The Genesis of Modern British Town Planning is a study from a historical standpoint of the social and economic factors which have made town planning one of the normal functions of government The author begins with an examination of the rapid growth of towns in the nineteenth century and the consequent emergence of inescapable new problems of health morality and economic efficiency and goes on to discuss the chief ways in which a remedy for these problems was sought in the later part of the century Separate chapters are devoted to new model villages and towns to the spread of suburbs and to the improvement of already established towns by means of clearance and rebuilding schemes bye law control and efforts of private philanthropy The final section of the book shows how the successes and failures of earlier attempts at reforms stimulated a demand for something more comprehensive which found expression in the town planning act of 1909 and ends by considering the influences that brought to the town planning movement a new strength and importance in the 1930s and the war years The author has drawn his material from a wide range of government and local authority reports the writing of philanthropists and social workers local guides and topographical works and the book will be of great value to those interested in social history architecture and urban sociology Town Planning and Pollution Control Christopher Wood,1976 When We Build Again Bournville Village Trust,2013-07-24 Like many UK cities Birmingham was heavily bombed during the Second World War and as with so many bombed British cities and many un bombed ones that jumped on to the re planning bandwagon there was a clear imperative to reconstruct But Birmingham was atypical in how it went about this The city had begun planning in the mid 1930s principally to replace vast quantities of slum housing and there had been suggestions about ring roads even from the time of the First World War So plans were available virtually ready to go and were approved by a private Act of Parliament in 1946 Yet within Birmingham there were individuals and organisations with a great interest and influence in planning matters This followed a significant and long standing local tradition from the Chamberlain family to Nettlefold s pioneering work on planning and housing at the start of the twentieth century Prominent amongst these was the Cadbury family and the Bournville Village Trust and one of its immediate responses to bomb damage was the book When We Build Again This was immediately influential in several respects as contemporary reviews and ongoing citations demonstrate It highlighted some less palatable truths about conditions in the city and more widely with ideas about what might be done To modern eyes some of these are radical for example the wholesale redevelopment of the Jewellery Quarter an area which was recently proposed for World Heritage status The origins of the derided post war comprehensive clearance approach lie in these papers Further it used innovative and striking graphics to communicate statistical information to lay readers including the use of striking photography of places and particularly people Also included in this volume is a facsimile of a second Bournville Trust publication from 1955 Birmingham Fifty Years On This less famous but equally important publication grew from a frustration at the slow pace of post war reconstruction and envisaged what the city would look like half a century later The Architect and Building News ,1923 Building ,1912 The Essential Guide to Planning Law Adam Sheppard,Deborah Peel,Heather Ritchie,Sophie Berry,2017-02-15 This comprehensive yet concise textbook is the first to provide a focused subject specific guide to planning practice and law Giving students essential background and contextual information to planning s statutory basis the information is supported by practical and applied discussion to help students understand planning in the real world The book is written in an accessible style enabling students with little or no planning law knowledge to engage in the subject and develop the necessary level of understanding required for both professionally accredited and non accredited courses in built environment subjects The book will be of value to students on a range of built environment courses particularly urban planning architecture environmental management and property related programmes as well as law and practice orientated modules
