Competitiveness of CEE Economies and Businesses Piotr Trąpczyński, Łukasz Puślecki, Mirosław Jarosiński, 2016-07-28 This book presents peer reviewed state of the art conceptual and empirical papers devoted to changes in the international competitive position of the Central and Eastern European CEE region its countries and businesses While the unprecedented scale of transformation in the CEE region has provided a distinct research setting for international business and economics scholars for more than two decades

there have also been recent discussions about the extent to which the region continues to have a unique business environment. The region's economies have reached different levels of market development and modern business practice adoption, with some of them now frequently classified as advanced economies. Consequently, the same level of heterogeneity among CEE countries can also be observed at the sector and business level. The contributions in this book highlight possible sources of competitive advantage for CEE countries and firms in light of recent intensive debates about the danger of the middle income trap and the potential solutions to it.

International Banking in the New Era Suk-Joong Kim, Michael D. McKenzie, 2010-11-10. Stock market development under globalization: whither the gains from reforms? Augusto de la Torre, Sergio L. Schmukler, Juan Carlos Gozzi, 2007. Abstract: Over the past decades, many countries have implemented significant reforms to foster domestic capital market development. These reforms included stock market liberalization, privatization programs, and the establishment of regulatory and supervisory frameworks. Despite the intense reform efforts, the performance of capital markets in several countries has been disappointing. To study whether reforms have had the intended effects on capital markets, the authors analyze the impact of six capital market reforms on domestic stock market development and internationalization using event studies. They find that reforms tend to be followed by significant increases in domestic market capitalization, trading, and capital raising. Reforms are also followed by an increase in the share of activity in international equity markets, with potential negative spillover effects on domestic markets.

METU Studies in Development, 2006

Capital Market Development Augusto de la Torre, Juan Carlos Gozzi, Sergio L. Schmukler, 2007 Over the past decades many countries have implemented significant reforms to foster capital market development Latin American countries were at the forefront of this process The authors analyze where Latin American capital markets stand after these reforms They find that despite the intense reform effort capital markets in Latin America remain underdeveloped relative to markets in other regions Furthermore stock markets are below what can be expected given Latin America's economic and institutional fundamentals The authors discuss alternative ways of interpreting this evidence They argue that it is difficult to pinpoint which policies Latin American countries should pursue to overcome their poor capital market development Moreover they argue that expectations about the outcome of the reform process may need to be revisited to take into account intrinsic characteristics of emerging economies The latter may limit the scope for developing deep domestic capital markets in a context of international financial integration
