Empowering Children Childrens Rights Education As A Pathway To Citizenship:

Empowering Children R. Brian Howe, Katherine Covell, 2007-06-09 Approved by the General Assembly of the United Nations in 1989 the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child affirms that children in all countries have fundamental rights including rights to education To date 192 states are signatories to or have in some form ratified the accord Children are still imperilled in many countries however and are often not made aware of their guaranteed rights In Empowering Children R Brian Howe and Katherine Covell assert that educating children about their basic rights is a necessary means not only of fulfilling a country s legal obligations but also of advancing education about democratic principles and the practice of citizenship The authors contend that children s rights education empowers children as persons and as rights respecting citizens in democratic societies Such education has a contagion effect that brings about a general social knowledge on human rights and social responsibility Although there remain obstacles to the implementation of children s rights in many countries Howe and Covell argue that reforming schools and enhancing teacher education are absolutely essential to the creation of a new culture of respect toward children as citizens Their thorough and passionate work marks a significant advance in the field

Children's Rights Ursula Kilkelly, 2017-07-05 The articles in this volume shed light on some of the major tensions in the field of children s rights such as the ways in which children s best interests and respect for their autonomy can be reconciled challenges such as how the CRC can be made a reality in the lives of children in the face of ignorance apathy or outright opposition and critiques whether children s rights are a Western imposition or a successful global consensus Along the way the writing covers a myriad of issues encompassing the opposition to the CRC in the US gay parenting Dr Seuss s take on children s autonomy the voice of neonates on their health care the role of NGO in supporting child labourers in India and young people in detention and more

Children's Rights Education in Diverse Classrooms Lee Jerome, Hugh Starkey, 2021-04-08 With PISA tables accountability and performance management pulling educators in one direction and the understanding that education is a social process embedded in cultural contexts tailored to meet the needs and challenges of individuals and communities in another it is easy to end up in seeing teachers as positioned as opponents to the system Jerome and Starkey argue that the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child UNCRC 1989 can provide a pragmatic starting point for educators to challenge some of these unsettling trends in a way which does not set up unnecessary opposition with policy makers They review the evidence from international evaluations surveys and case studies about practice in human rights and child right education before exploring the key principles of transformative and experiential education to offer a robust theoretical framework that can guide the development of child rights education They also draw out practical implications and outline a series of teaching and learning approaches that are values informed aligned with children s rights and focused on quality learning

Ruck, Michele Peterson-Badali, Michael Freeman, 2016-12-08 While the notion of young people as individuals worthy or capable of having rights is of relatively recent origin over the past several decades there has been a substantial increase in both social and political commitment to children s rights as well as a tendency to grant young people some of the rights that were typically accorded only to adults In addition there has been a noticeable shift in orientation from a focus on children s protection and provision to an emphasis on children s participation and self determination With contributions from a wide range of international scholars the Handbook of Children s Rights brings together research theory and practice from diverse perspectives on children s rights This volume constitutes a comprehensive treatment of critical perspectives concerning children s rights in their various forms Its contributions address some of the major scholarly tensions and policy debates comprising the current discourse on children s rights including the best interests of the child evolving capacities of the child states rights versus children s rights rights of children versus parental or family rights children as citizens children s rights versus children s responsibilities and balancing protection and participation In addition to its multidisciplinary focus the handbook includes perspectives from social science domains in which children s rights scholarship has evolved largely independently due to distinct and seemingly competing assumptions and disciplinary approaches e g childhood studies developmental psychology sociology of childhood anthropology and political science The handbook also brings together diverse methodological approaches to the study of children s rights including both quantitative and qualitative perspectives and policy analysis This comprehensive cosmopolitan and timely volume serves as an important reference for both scholarly and policy driven interest in the voices and perspectives of children and youth Rethinking Children's Citizenship T. Cockburn, 2012-11-16 This book explores the relationship between children and citizenship analyzing international perspectives on citizenship and human rights and developing new methods for facilitating the recognition of children as participating agents within society The Oxford Handbook of Children's Rights Law Jonathan Todres, Shani M. King, 2020-02-19 Children s rights law is a relatively young but rapidly developing discipline The U N Convention on the Rights of the Child the field s core legal instrument is the most widely ratified human rights treaty in history Yet like children themselves children s rights are often relegated to the margins in mainstream legal political and other discourses despite their application to approximately one third of the world's population and every human being's first stages of life. Now thirty years old, the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC) signalled a definitive shift in the way that children are viewed and understood from passive objects subsumed within the family to full human beings with a distinct set of rights. Although the CRC and other children's rights law have spurred positive changes in law, policies and attitudes toward children in numerous countries, implementation remains a work in progress. We have reached a state in the evolution of children's rights in which we need more critical evaluation and assessment of the CRC and the large body of children's rights law and policy that this treaty has inspired. We have moved from conceptualizing and adopting legislation to focusing on implementation and making the content of children's rights meaningful in the lives of all children. This book provides a critical evaluation and assessment of children's rights law including the CRC. With contributions from leading scholars and practitioners from around the world, it aims to elucidate the content of children's rights law, explore the complexities of implementation and identify critical challenges and opportunities for children's rights law.

Globalisation, Human Rights Education and Reforms Joseph Zajda, Sev Ozdowski, 2016-09-23. This book, the seventeenth instalment in the 24 volume series Globalisation, Comparative Education and Policy Research, explores the interrelationship between ideology, the state and human rights education reforms, setting it in a global context. The book examines major human rights education reforms and policy issues in a global culture. It focuses on the ambivalent and problematic relationship between the state, globalisation and human rights education discourses. Using a number of diverse paradigms ranging from critical theory to historical comparative research, the authors examine the reasons for and the outcomes of human rights education reforms and policy. The authors discuss discourses surrounding the major dimensions affecting the human rights education, namely national identity, democracy and ideology. These dimensions are among the most critical and significant dimensions defining and contextualising the processes surrounding the nation building, identity politics and human rights education globally. With this as its focus, the chapters represent hand-picked scholarly research on major discourses in the field of human rights education reforms. The book draws upon recent studies in the areas of globalisation, equality and the role of the state in human rights education reforms. Furthermore, the perception of globalisation as dynamic and multi-faceted processes clearly necessitates a multiple perspective approach in the study of human rights education. This book provides that perspective commendably. It also critiques current human rights education practices and policy reforms. It illustrates the way shifts in the relationship between the state and human rights education policy. In the book, the authors, who come from diverse backgrounds and regions, attempt insightfully to provide a worldview of current developments in research concerning human rights education and citizenship education globally. The book contributes in a very scholarly way to a more holistic understanding of the nexus between nation, state, human rights education both locally and globally.
