Homework

Brief

Choose a 3D model from 3D drawings that I've done before. Select one from positive version or negative version.

Concept

I decided to make a model of this same vase from a positive version 3D drawing. I used 200 gsm papers to make a model because they're flexible and strong enough to be a stable model. I set the standard height at 15 cm and the highest is 16 cm.

Material

- 200 gsm papers
- Japanese paper
- Glue
- Cutter / scissors
- Cutting board
- Pencils

Working Process

1. I put Japanese paper on a base for my model.
2. Draw a plan on 200 gsm paper and cut them in each part.
3. Make each part 3D plan and cut them.
4. Fold and glue them into 3D shape.
5. Arrange each 3D model part on the base and glue them on the base.

Final Outcome

Reflection

From making this model, I found that the part that I selected to make this project is quite complicated and hard to work on. When I draw a plan for each piece, I am confused about them sometimes and make a lot of mistakes. And we can see some glue and pencil stained on my model which is not supposed to appear on good work. I need to improve more in this part. And on some parts, they still have an early shape because of my cutting and folding.

Architecture in Dialogue with an Activated Ground Urs Bette,2020-03-30 Architecture in Dialogue with an Activated Ground sets out to validate the role of the unreasonable in the design process Using case study projects architect Urs Bette gives an insight into the epistemological processes of his creative practice and unveils the strategies he deploys in order to facilitate the poetic aspects of architecture within a discourse whose evaluation parameters predominantly involve reason Themes discussed include the emergence of space from the staged opposition between the architectural object and the site and the relationship between emotive cognition and analytic synthesis in the design act In both cases there is a necessary engagement with forms of unreasonable thought action or behaviours By arguing for the usefulness and validity of the unreasonable in architecture and by investigating the performative relationship between object and ground Bette contributes to the discourse on extensions growth and urban densification that tap into local histories and voices including those of the seemingly inanimate the architecture itself and the ground it sits upon to inform the site related production of architectural character and space In doing so he raises debates about the values pursued in design approval processes and the ways in which site relatedness is both produced and judged      The Elements of Graphic Design Alex W.
