Greenberg,1995-07-28 This book investigates through the problem of the earth s shape part of the development of post Newtonian mechanics by the Parisian scientific community during the first half of the eighteenth century In the Principia Newton first raised the question of the earth s shape John Greenberg shows how continental scholars outside France influenced efforts in Paris to solve the problem and he also demonstrates that Parisian scholars including Bouguer and Fontaine did work that Alexis Claude Clairaut used in developing his mature theory of the earth s shape The evolution of Parisian mechanics proved not to be the replacement of a Cartesian paradigm by a Newtonian one a replacement that might be expected from Thomas Kuhn s formulations about scientific revolutions but a complex process instead involving many areas of research and contributions of different kinds from the entire scientific world Greenberg both explores the myriad of technical problems that underlie the historical development of part of post Newtonian mechanics which have only been rarely analyzed by Western scholars and embeds his technical discussion in a framework that involves social and institutional history politics and biography Instead of focusing exclusively on the historiographical problem Greenberg shows as well that international scientific communication was as much a vital part of the scientific progress of individual nations during the first half of the eighteenth century as it is today Chamber's Information for the People William Chambers,1848 The Strategic Role of Perigean Spring Tides in Nautical History and North American Coastal Flooding, 1635-1976 Fergus J. New Mathematical Tables Peter Barlow,1814 Ideas, Evidence, and Method Graciela De Pierris,2015-04-30 Graciela De Pierris presents a novel interpretation of the relationship between skepticism and naturalism in Hume s epistemology and a new appraisal of Hume s place within early modern thought Whereas a dominant trend in recent Hume scholarship maintains that there are no skeptical arguments concerning causation and induction in Book I Part III of the Treatise

Graciela De Pierris presents a detailed reading of the skeptical argument she finds there and how this argument initiates a train of skeptical reasoning that begins in Part III and culminates in Part IV This reasoning is framed by Hume s version of the modern theory of ideas developed by Descartes and Locke The skeptical implications of this theory however do not arise as in traditional interpretations of Hume s skepticism from the veil of perception They arise from Hume s elaboration of a presentational phenomenological model of ultimate evidence according to which there is always a justificatory gap between what is or has been immediately presented to the mind and any ideas that go beyond it This happens paradigmatically in the causal inductive inference and as De Pierris argues in demonstrative inference as well Yet in spite of his firm commitment to radical skepticism Hume also accepts the naturalistic standpoint of science and common life and he does so on the novel interpretation presented here because of an equally firm commitment to Newtonian science in general and the Newtonian inductive method in particular Hume defends the Newtonian method against the mechanical philosophy while simultaneously rejecting all attempts including those of the Newtonians to find a place for the supernatural within our understanding of nature
