Roderick Floud one of Britain's preeminent economic historians writes that gardens have been created in Britain since Roman times but that their true growth began in the seventeenth century by the eighteenth century nurseries in London took up 100 acres with ten million plants that were worth more than all of the nurseries in France combined Floud's book takes us through more than three centuries of English history as he writes of the kings queens and princes whose garden obsessions changed the landscape of England itself from Stuart Georgian and Victorian England to today's Windsors Here are William and Mary who brought Dutch gardens and bulbs to Britain William who twice had his entire garden lowered in order to see the river from his apartments and his successor Queen Anne who like many others since vowed to spend little on her gardens and instead spent millions Floud also writes of Frederick Prince of Wales the founder of Kew Gardens who spent more than 40 000 on a single twenty five foot tulip tree for Carlton House Queen Victoria who built the largest most advanced and most efficient kitchen garden in Britain and Prince Charles who created and designed the gardens of Highgrove inspired by his boyhood memories of his grandmother's gardens We see Sarah Duchess of Marlborough who created a magnificent garden at Blenheim Palace only to tear it apart and build a greater one Deborah Duchess of Devonshire the savior of Chatsworth's 100 acre garden in the midst of its 35 000 acres and the gardens of lesser mortals among them Gertrude Jekyll and Vita Sackville West both notable garden designers and writers We see the designers of royal estates among them Henry Wise William Kent Humphrey Repton and the greatest of all English gardeners Capability Brown who created the 150 acre lake of Blenheim Palace earned millions annually and designed more than 170 parks many still in existence today We learn how gardening became a major catalyst for innovation central heating came from experiments to heat greenhouses with hot water pipes how the new iron industry of industrializing Britain supplied a myriad of tools mowers pumps and the boilers that heated the greenhouses and finally Floud explores how gardening became an enormous industry as well as an art form in Britain and by the nineteenth century was unrivaled anywhere in the world Gardens of England Ernest Thomas Cook, 1911 Gardens of England (Classic Reprint), 2015-07-13 Excerpt from Gardens of England About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works The Formal Garden in England Sir Reginald Theodore Blomfield, 1901 The Gardens of England George Plumptre, 2013 In England garden visiting is a national obsession More than 80 years ago the National Gardens Scheme NGS was founded with the aim of raising money for charity by opening gardens of interest to the public This book gives you the opportunity to enjoy 50 of the country's greatest gardens from the comfort of your armchair The Shell Guide to the Gardens of England

Cataloging Policy and Support Office, 2009 Gardens of England, 1911 The Picturesque Garden in Europe John Dixon Hunt, 2002 The picturesque or natural garden was the rage in eighteenth century Europe Inspired by painting it also reflected changing attitudes to nature Largely created and crafted in England it was exported to other countries which strove to adapt its forms to local conditions This is the first book about that famous episode in garden history to look at the larger European map of landscape design The book traces the rise of the picturesque garden in England exploring intricate dialogues between practical place making and the theoretical formulations of the picturesque that began with Alexander Pope and Joseph Addison and ended with the writings of William Gilpin Uvedale Price and Richard Payne Knight in the 1790s It surveys a wide range of sites Rousham Stourhead Kew Hestercombe The Leasowes and Hafod among others and the contributions to their creation by both amateurs and professionals Europeans visited and wrote about many of these famous English landscapes But the impact on European countries of the English example was complicated by the parallel rise of a picturesque garden in France which had its own cultural direction even while it looked to England and China for inspiration The French produced a crop of theoretical essays on the new modern garden as well as a set of astonishing designs Mereville Desert de Retz Monceau Moulin Joli Ermenonville that were wholly and distinctly French despite some superficial similarities with English creations Finally the book surveys the impact of English and French design upon other countries in particular Sweden the German speaking lands and Russia The range of effect that could be created on European sites is considerable and belies the notion that the picturesque was simply a process of making 3 D pictures in the landscape
