Advanced Gas Purification Technologies for Co-gasification of Coal, Refineryby-products, Biomass and Waste, Targeted to Clean Power Produced from Gas Andsteam Turbine Generator Sets and Fuel Cells (Agapute) ,2011 The objective of the project was to improve cleaning technologies to be modelled validated interlinked in optimised processes and economically assessed for application to syngas considering the enlargement of the fuel panorama The work was organised in two main lines The first line focused on the improvement of purification technologies carried out at two levels a development of better performing models b scientific advancement on improved and innovative technologies Level a activities carried out in WP3 interlinked with WP1 2 and WP13 16 produced a repository containing relevant techno economic details about various gasification process scenarios Level b activities were the subject of WP4 12 Although valuable scientific advancements have been reached as demonstrated by published material in archived journals their techno economic impact in actual gasification processes has been achieved in only a few cases mainly because this advanced knowledge could only be tested at the laboratory scale The second line refers to the modelling validation and techno economic evaluation of optimised process schemes for gas cleaning targeted at enhancing the industrial design of gasification processes at a preliminary stage WP13 created and validated an innovative superstructure for modelling and simulating gasification processes that is supported by a modular software toolset WP13 16 open to new features standards compliant interoperable and allows for future development A versatile simulation and optimisation toolkit was carried out for the first time for the preliminary design of new process alternatives the redesign of existing ones and improvement of the operating conditions of real plants However further development is needed for commercial use

Desulfurization of Hot Coal Gas Aysel T. Atimtay, Douglas P. Harrison, 2013-06-29 Economic and environmental requirements for advanced power generating systems demand the removal of corrosive and other sulfurous compounds from hot coal gas After a brief account of the world energy resources and an overview of clean coal technologies a review of regenerable metal oxide sorbents for cleaning the hot gas is provided Zinc oxide copper oxide calcium oxide manganese oxide based as well as supported and mixed metal oxide sorbents are treated Performance analysis of these sorbents effects of various parameters on the desulfurization efficiency kinetics of sulfidation and regeneration reactions sulfiding and regeneration mechanisms are discussed Two chapters present recent results in the direct production of elemental sulfur from regeneration or SO₂ rich gases

Gas Cleaning at High Temperatures Roland Clift, Jonathan P. K. Seville, 1993 In recent years interest in the technology of gas cleaning at high temperatures has grown driven in part by environmental legislation but also by demands for increases in process efficiency and intensity notably for power generation and waste incineration Some techniques for high temperature gas cleaning have now reached practical exploitation and industrial applications are described by some of the contributors to this volume

Engineering Development of Advanced Physical Fine Coal Cleaning for Premium Fuel Applications, 1993 This project is a step in the Department of Energy's program to show that ultra clean fuel can be produced from selected coals and that the fuel will be a cost effective replacement for oil and natural gas now fueling boilers in this country The replacement of premium fossil fuels with coal can only be realized if retrofit costs are kept to a minimum and retrofit boiler emissions meet national goals for clean air These concerns establish the specifications for maximum ash and sulfur levels and combustion properties of the ultra clean coal The primary objective is to develop the design base for prototype commercial advanced fine coal cleaning facilities capable of producing ultra clean coals suitable for conversion to coal water slurry fuel The fine coal cleaning technologies are advanced column flotation and selective agglomeration A secondary objective is to develop the design base for near term commercial integration of advanced fine coal cleaning technologies in new or existing coal preparation plants for economically and efficiently processing minus 28 mesh coal fines A third objective is to determine the distribution of toxic trace elements between clean coal and refuse when applying the advance column flotation and selective agglomeration technologies The project team consists of Amax Research Development Center Amax R D Amax Coal industries Bechtel Corporation Center for Applied Energy Research CAER at the University of Kentucky and Arcanum Corporation
