Handbook of Party Politics Richard S. Katz, William Joseph Crotty, 2006 Party Politics in New Democracies Paul Webb, Stephen White, 2007-09-20 Comparative Politics is a series for students and teachers of political science that deals with contemporary government and politics The General Editors are Professor Alfio Mastropaolo University of Turin and Kenneth Newton University of Southampton and Wissenschaftszentrum Berlin The series is published in association with the European Consortium for Political Research The sister volume to Political Parties in Advanced Industrial Democracies this book offers a systematic and rigorous analysis of parties in some of the world's major new democracies Drawing on a wealth of expertise and data the book assesses the popular legitimacy organizational development and functional performance of political parties in Latin America and postcommunist Eastern Europe It demonstrates the generational differences between parties in the old and new democracies and reveals contrasts among the latter Parties are shown to be at their most feeble in those recently transitional democracies characterized by personalistic candidate centred forms of politics but in other new democracies especially those with parliamentary systems parties are more stable and institutionalized enabling them to facilitate a meaningful degree of popular choice and control Wherever party politics is weakly institutionalized political inequality tends to be greater commitment to pluralism less certain clientelism and corruption more pronounced and populist demagoguery a greater temptation Without party democracy's hold is more tenuous Party Politics in Southeast Asia Dirk Tomsa, Andreas Ufen, 2013 Contributing to the growing discourse on political parties in Asia this book looks at parties in Southeast Asia's most competitive electoral democracies of Indonesia Thailand and the Philippines It highlights the diverse dynamics of party politics in the region and provides new insights into organizational structures mobilizational strategies and the multiple dimensions of linkages between political parties and their voters The book focuses on the prominence of clientelistic practices and strategies both within parties as well as between parties and their voters It demonstrates that clientelism is extremely versatile and can take many forms ranging from traditional personalized relationships between a patron and a client to the modern incarnations of broker driven network clientelism that is often based on more anonymous relations The book also discusses how contemporary political parties often combine clientelistic practices with more formal patterns of organization and communication thus raising questions about neat analytical dichotomies Straddling the intersection between political science and area studies this book is of interest to students and scholars of contemporary Southeast Asian politics and political scientists and Asian Studies specialists with a broader research interest in comparative democratization studies Territorial Party Politics in Western Europe W. Swenden, B. Maddens, 2015-12-04 This book looks at the organization and strategy of state wide parties from across some of the most important multi layered countries in Western Europe The volume provides the first systematic attempt to study the strategy of state wide parties on the basis of the comparative literature on issue voting From Party Politics to Personalized Politics? Gideon Rahat, Ofer Kenig, 2018-06-13 What do Beppe Grillo Silvio Berlusconi Emmanuel Macron and also Donald Trump have in common They are prime examples of the personalization of politics and the decline of political parties This volume systematically examines these two prominent developments in contemporary democratic politics and the relationship between them It presents a cross national comparative comparison that covers around 50 years in 26 democracies through the use of more than 20 indicators It offers the most comprehensive comparative cross national estimation of the variance in the levels and patterns of party change and political personalization among countries to date using existing works as well injecting fresh cross national comparative data In the case of party change it offers an analysis that extends beyond the dichotomous debate of party decline versus party adaptation In the matter of political personalization the emphasis on variance helps in bridging between the high theoretical expectations and disappointing empirical findings As for the theoretically sound linkage between the two phenomena not only is this the first study to comprise a comprehensive cross national examination but it also proposes a more nuanced understanding of this relationship Comparative Politics is a series for researchers teachers and students of political science that deals with contemporary government and politics Global in scope books in the series are characterised by a stress on comparative analysis and strong methodological rigour The series is published in association with the European Consortium for Political Research For more information visit www.ecprnet.eu The series is edited by Emilie van Haute Professor of Political Science Universit libre de Bruxelles Ferdinand Müller Rommel Director of the Center for the Study of Democracy Leuphana University and Susan Scarrow John and Rebecca Moores Professor of Political Science University of Houston Multi-Level Party Politics in Western Europe K. The Reshaping of West European Party Politics Christoffer Green-Pedersen, 2019-07-31 Long gone are the times when class based political parties with extensive membership dominated politics Instead party politics has become issue based Surprisingly few studies have focused on how the issue content of West European party politics has developed over the past decades Empirically Reshaping of West European Party Politics studies party politics in Belgium Denmark France Germany the Netherlands Sweden and the UK from 1980 and onwards This book highlights the more complex party system agenda with the decline but not disappearance of macroeconomic issues as well as the rise in new politics issues together with education and health care Moreover various new politics issues such as immigration the environment and European integration have seen very different trajectories To explain the development of the individual issues this volume develops a new theoretical model labelled the issue incentive model of party system attention The aim of the model is to explain how much attention issues get throughout the party system which is labelled the party system agenda To explain the development of the party system agenda one needs to focus on the incentives that individual policy issues offer to large mainstream parties i.e. the typical Social Democratic Christian Democratic or Conservative Liberal parties that have dominated West European governments for decades The core idea of the model is that the incentives that individual policy issues offer to these vote and office seeking parties depend on three factors namely issue characteristics issue ownership and coalition considerations The issue incentive model builds on and develops a top down perspective on which the issue content of party politics is determined by the strategic considerations of political parties and their competition with each other Comparative Politics is a series for researchers teachers and students of political science that deals with contemporary government and politics Global in scope books in the series are characterised by a stress on comparative analysis and strong methodological rigour The series is published in association with the European Consortium for Political Research For more information visit www.ecprnet.eu The series is edited by Emilie van Haute Professor of Political Science Universit libre de Bruxelles Ferdinand M ller Rommel Director of the Center for the Study of Democracy Leuphana University and Susan Scarrow John and Rebecca Moores Professor of Political Science University of Houston

Constraints on Party Politics Thomas M. Meyer, 2013-04-30 Political scientists are quite good at predicting optimal policy positions that under the given circumstances allow parties to get maximal payoffs in terms of policy office or votes What we do not know is whether parties are actually able to take these positions or whether they are constrained to do so This book attempts to narrow this gap The major argument is that parties do not choose policy positions from scratch and that they cannot freely change their policy platforms Rather voters lacking perception of changing party platforms and intra party factors constrain parties when shifting their policy positions An empirical analysis of party policy shifts in ten Western European democracies shows that these constraints differ across parties and thus affect the parties position taking differently Considering this variation is important to derive more precise predictions for parties policy platforms and for our understanding of party behaviour in general This book attempts to narrow this gap The major argument is that parties do not choose policy positions from scratch and that they cannot freely change their policy platforms Rather voters lacking perception of changing party platforms and intra party factors constrain parties when shifting their policy positions An empirical analysis of party policy shifts in ten Western European democracies shows that these constraints differ across parties and thus affect the parties position taking differently Considering this variation is important to derive more precise predictions for parties policy platforms and for our understanding of party behaviour in general
