Flood Risk Science and Management Gareth Pender, Hazel Faulkner, 2010-12-01 Approaches to avoid loss of life and limit disruption and damage from flooding have changed significantly in recent years Worldwide there has been a move from a strategy of flood defence to one of flood risk management Flood risk management includes flood prevention using hard defences where appropriate but also requires that society learns to live with floods and that stakeholders living in flood prone areas develop coping strategies to increase their resilience to flood impacts when these occur This change in approach represents a paradigm shift which stems from the realisation that continuing to strengthen and extend conventional flood defences is unsustainable economically environmentally and in terms of social equity Flood risk management recognises that a sustainable approach must rest on integrated measures that reduce not only the probability of flooding but also the consequences This is essential as increases in the probability of inundation are inevitable in many areas of the world due to climate change while socio economic development will lead to spiralling increases in the consequences of flooding unless land use in floodplains is carefully planned Flood Risk Science and Management provides an extensive and comprehensive synthesis of current research in flood management providing a multi disciplinary reference text covering a wide range of flood management topics Its targeted readership is the international research community from research students through to senior staff and flood management professionals such as engineers planners government officials and those with flood management responsibility in the public sector By using the concept of case study chapters international coverage is given to the topic

Post, 2014-04-17 Political economy scholarship suggests that private sector investment and thus economic growth is more likely to occur when formal institutions allow states to provide investors with credible commitments to protect property rights This book argues that this maxim does not hold for infrastructure privatization programs Rather differences in firm organizational structure better explain the viability of privatization contracts in weak institutional environments Domestic investors or if contracts are granted subnationally domestic investors with diverse holdings in their contract jurisdiction work most effectively in the volatile economic and political environments of the developing world They are able to negotiate mutually beneficial adaptations to their contracts with host governments because cross sector diversification provides them with informal contractual supports The book finds strong empirical support for this argument through an analysis of fourteen water and sanitation privatization contracts in Argentina and a statistical analysis of sector trends in developing countries     Land, Water and Development Malcolm Newson, 2008-09-17 Water is newsworthy there is or will be a world water crisis Aggravated by climate change we are approaching the limits of human exploitation of freshwater resources notably in growing essential food The complexities and uncertainties associated with improving our management of fresh water take the potential remedies out of the hands of simple local hard engineering and into much larger units the basin the ecosystem and the global context and also require longer term perspectives The Third Edition follows the same structure as its predecessors presenting the historical and scientific backgrounds to land water interactions and establishing the links with development processes and policies Throughout its two major messages are that our new philosophy should be one of humans in the ecosystem and that the guidance from science being uncertain and contested must be operationalized in a participatory system of governance based on participation Following a review of progress towards these elements in the developed world the international case studies update the situation in the developing world following the Millennium Development Goals our new emphasis on poverty and on global food supplies This book covers the multitude of scientific research findings development of tools and spatial temporal scale challenges which have emerged in the last decade Tensions are highlighted in the current and future role of large dams country studies are retained and considerably updated and development contexts are explored in greater depth as a dividing line in capacity to cope with land and water stress Technical issues have been expanded to cover major droughts environmental flows and the restoration of rivers and wetlands A separate chapter picks up these themes under terms of their relationship with uncertainty and the widespread perception that a new ethos of adaptive management is needed in the water sector For students of geography environmental science hydrology and development studies this innovative edition provides a reasoned academic basis of evidence for sustainable adaptive management of rivers and related large scale ecosystems using more than 600 new sources It will also prove invaluable for lecturers and practitioners

Vulnerability and Resilience to Natural Hazards Sven Fuchs, Thomas Thaler, 2018-03-22 In recent years there has been growing recognition that disaster risk cannot be reduced by focusing solely on physical hazards without considering factors that influence socio economic impact Vulnerability the susceptibility to the damaging impacts of hazards and resilience the ability to recover have become popular concepts in natural hazard and risk management This book provides a comprehensive overview of the concepts of vulnerability and resilience and their application to natural hazards research With contributions from both physical and social scientists it provides an interdisciplinary discussion of the different types of vulnerability and resilience the links between them and concludes with the remaining challenges and future directions of the field Examining global case studies from the US coast to Austria this is a valuable reference for researchers and graduate students working in natural hazard and risk reduction from both the natural and social sciences

Sustainable Development in World Investment Law Marie-Claire Cordonier Segger, Markus W. Gehring, Andrew Paul Newcombe, 2011-01-01 Sustainable development as defined by the World Commission on Environment and Development is development that meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs More specifically sustainable development is a process of change that seeks to improve the collective quality of life by focusing on economically socially and environmentally sound projects that are viable in the long term Sustainable development requires structural economic change and the foundation of that change is investment In developing nations with low levels of domestic savings investment predictably comes from abroad in the form of foreign direct investment A large and ever expanding number of international investment agreements are in place to govern these transactions While these accords seek to foster development while mitigating the risk involved in these types investments many questions remain unresolved This highly insightful book reflects the contributions of a variety of world renowned experts each of which is designed to provide the reader with valuable perspective on recent developments in investment law negotiations and jurisprudence from a sustainable development law perspective It offers answers to pertinent questions concerning advancements in investment law including the negotiation of numerous regional and bilateral agreements as well as the increasing number of disputes resolved in the World Bank s International Centre for the Settlement of Investment Disputes ICSID from different developed and developing country perspectives It lays out future directions for new treaty negotiations and dispute settlement proceedings as well as ongoing investment promotion efforts against a background of rapidly evolving international relationships between economic environment and development law It focuses on key issues in investment laws which have emerged as priorities in the negotiation of bilateral and regional investment agreements and have been clarified through recent decisions of the ICSID and other arbitral panel awards
