The Architecture of the Child Mind Marc H. Bornstein, Diane L. Putnick, 2019-02-21 What exactly does it mean to be intelligent Does intelligence manifest itself in one way or in different ways in children Do children fit any preconceived notions of intelligence Some theories assert a general g factor for intelligence that is universal and enters all mental abilities other theories state that there are many separate domains or faculties F's of intelligence and still others argue that the g and F's of intelligence coexist in a hierarchical relation The Architecture of the Child Mind g F's and the Hierarchical Model of Intelligence argues for the third option in young children Through state of the art methodologies in an intensive research program conducted with 4 year old children Bornstein and Putnick show that the structure of intelligence in the preschool child is best construed as a hierarchically organized combination of a General Intelligence factor g and multiple domain specific faculties F's The Architecture of the Child Mind offers a review of the history of intelligence theories and testing and a comprehensive and original research effort on the nature and structure of intelligence in young children before they enter school Its focus on intelligence will appeal to cognitive developmental and social psychologists as well as researchers and scholars in education particularly those specializing in early childhood education
