challenge of separating personal social and cultural forces from economic ones Ioannides provides a toolkit for the next generation of inquiry and he argues that quantifying the impact of social interactions in specific contexts is essential for grasping their scope and use in informing policy Revealing how empirical work on social interactions enriches our understanding of cities as engines of innovation and economic growth From Neighborhoods to Nations carries ramifications throughout the social sciences and beyond

OECD Urban Policy Reviews: China 2015 OECD, 2015-04-18 This review examines the major challenges associated with China's shift to a new model of urbanisation looking at a range of such issues as social and labour market policies, land use and transport planning, urban planning, urban governance and public finance. Cities, Economic Inequality and Justice Edwin Buitelaar, Anet Weterings, Roderik Ponds, 2017-07-28. Increasing economic inequality in cities and the spatial translation of that into more segregated neighbourhoods is top of the political agenda in developed countries. While the overall living standards have increased in the last century, the focus has now shifted from poverty to economic differences with a particular focus on the gap between the very poor and the ultra rich. The authors observe a common view among policy makers and researchers alike that urban economic inequality and segregation are increasing, that this increase is bad, and that money and people in the case of segregation need to be redistributed in response. In six compact chapters, this book enriches and broadens the debate. Chapters bring together the literature on the social effects of economic inequality and segregation and question whether there are sizeable effects and what their direction, positive or negative, is. The often conflated concepts of economic inequality and segregation and social injustice are disentangled and the moral implications are reflected on. The book is essential reading for students and academics of Planning Theory, Planning Ethics, Urban Geography, Urban Economics, Economic Geography and Urban Sociology.
