Crusading and Chronicle Writing on the Medieval Baltic Frontier Marek Tamm,Linda Kaljundi,Carsten Selch Jensen,2016-04-22 The Chronicle of Henry of Livonia written by a missionary priest in the early thirteenth century to record the history of the crusades to Livonia and Estonia around 1186 1227 offers one of the most vivid examples of the early thirteenth century crusading ideology in practice Step by step it has become one of the most widely read and acknowledged frontier crusading and missionary chronicles Henry s chronicle offers many opportunities to test and broaden the new approaches and key concepts brought along by recent developments in medieval studies including the new pluralist definition of crusading and the relationship between the peripheries and core areas of Europe While recent years have produced a significant amount of new research into Henry of Livonia much of it has been limited to particular historical traditions and languages A key objective of this book therefore is to synthesise the current state of research for the international scholarly audience The volume provides a multi sided and multi disciplinary companion to the chronicle and is divided into three parts The first part Representations brings into focus the imaginary sphere of the chronicle the various images brought into existence by the amalgamation of crusading and missionary ideology and the frontier experience This is followed by studies on Practices which examines the chronicle s reflections of the diplomatic religious and military practices of the christianisation and colonisation processes in medieval Livonia The volume concludes with a section on the Appropriations which maps the reception history of the chronicle the dynamics of the medieval early modern and modern national uses and abuses of the text

Geographies of Nationhood Catherine Gibson,2022-03-29 Geographies of Nationhood examines the meteoric rise of ethnographic mapmaking in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries as a form of visual and material culture that gave expression to territorialised visions of nationhood In the Russian Empire s Baltic provinces the development of ethnographic cartography as part of the broader field of statistical data visualisation progressively became a tool that lent legitimacy and an experiential dimension to nationalist arguments as well as a wide range of alternative spatial configurations that rendered the inhabitants of the Baltic as part of local imperial and global geographies Catherine Gibson argues that map production and the spread of cartographic literacy as a mass phenomenon in Baltic society transformed how people made sense of linguistic ethnic and religious similarities and differences by imbuing them with an alleged scientific objectivity that was later used to determine the political structuring of the Baltic region and beyond Geographies of Nationhood treads new ground by expanding the focus beyond elites to include a diverse range of mapmakers such as local bureaucrats commercial enterprises clergymen family members teachers and landowners It shifts the focus from imperial learned and military institutions to examine the proliferation of mapmaking across diverse sites in the Empire including the provincial administration local learned societies private homes and schools Understanding ethnographic maps in the social context of their production circulation consumption and reception is crucial for assessing their impact as powerful shapers of popular geographical conceptions of nationhood state building and border drawing
