Ancient Perspectives Richard J. A. Talbert, 2014-02-14 Ancient Perspectives encompasses a vast arc of space and time Western Asia to North Africa and Europe from the third millennium BCE to the fifth century CE to explore mapmaking and worldviews in the ancient civilizations of Mesopotamia Egypt Greece and Rome In each society maps served as critical economic political and personal tools but there was little consistency in how and why they were made Much like today maps in antiquity meant very different things to different people Ancient Perspectives presents an ambitious fresh overview of cartography and its uses The seven chapters range from broad based analyses of mapping in Mesopotamia and Egypt to a close focus on Ptolemy's ideas for drawing a world map based on the theories of his Greek predecessors at Alexandria The remarkable accuracy of Mesopotamian city plans is revealed as is the creation of maps by Romans to support the proud claim that their emperor's rule was global in its reach By probing the instruments and techniques of both Greek and Roman surveyors one chapter seeks to uncover how their extraordinary planning of roads aqueducts and tunnels was achieved Even though none of these civilizations devised the means to measure time or distance with precision they still conceptualized their surroundings natural and man made near and far and felt the urge to record them by inventive means that this absorbing volume reinterprets and compares

History of Greece and Rome, Including Judea, Egypt, and Carthage John Russell, 2015-06-12

Excerpt from History of Greece and Rome Including Judea Egypt and Carthage In completing his series of school histories the author of the present work has deemed it important to comprise in the same volume the ancient history of Greece and Rome and of the other ancient nations who were all more or less connected with these powerful and far conquering states Although it would be easy to multiply volumes by giving to each of the less civilized and influential nations a minute and extended history yet the true interest of learners would not be consulted by such a course To trace the progress of civilization and intellect with that degree of distinctness which is requisite in a course of historical instruction at school it is deemed sufficient so far as ancient history is concerned to study a clear and succinct history of Greece and Rome with such notices of the other ancient nations as will give a correct idea of their extent and importance the leading events and characters occurring in their annals and their relations with those two great states which were the chief depositaries of power learning and refinement during the respective periods of their independence Such a course has been followed in this volume and it is hoped that the information which it comprises will enable the young student to acquire a correct idea of the earlier periods of history and to understand the allusions which he may meet with in a general course of literature to the great nations characters and events of antiquity About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
