Gaseous Loss Of Nitrogen From Plantsoil Systems:

Advances in Integrated Soil Fertility Management in sub-Saharan Africa: Challenges and Opportunities Andre Bationo, Boaz Waswa, Job Kihara, Joseph Kimetu, 2007-10-16 Food insecurity is a fundamental challenge to human welfare and economic growth in Africa Low agricultural production leads to low incomes poor nutrition vulnerability to risk and threat and lack of empowerment This book offers a comprehensive synthesis of agricultural research and development experiences from sub Saharan Africa The text highlights practical lessons from the sub Saharan Africa region

Gaseous Loss of Nitrogen from Plant-Soil Systems J.R. Freney, J.R. Simpson, 2013-04-17 A growing interest has been shown recently in the dynamics of nitrogen in agricultural and natural ecosystems This has been caused by increasing demands for food and fibre by a rapidly expanding world population and by a growing concern that increased land clearing cultivation and use of both fertilizer and biologically fixed nitrogen can have detrimental effects on the environment These include effects on water quality eutrophication of surface waters and changes in atmospheric composition all caused by increased cycling of nitrogenous compounds The input and availability of nitrogen frequently affects the productivity of farming systems more than any other single management factor but often the nitrogen is used inefficiently Much of the fertilizer nitrogen applied to the soil is not utilised by the crop it is lost either in solution form by leaching of nitrate or in gaseous forms as ammonia nitrous oxide nitric oxide or dinitrogen The leached nitrate can contaminate rivers and ground waters while the emitted ammonia can contaminate surface waters or combine with atmospheric sulfur dioxide to form aerosols which affect visibility health and climate There is also concern that increased evolution of nitrous oxide will deplete the protective ozone layer of the stratosphere The possibility of a link between the intensity of agricultural use of nitrogen nitrous oxide emissions and amounts of stratospheric ozone has focussed attention on these interactions

Okeyo, Fredah Maina, Job Maguta Kihara, 2011-08-30 Africa can achieve self sufficiency in food production through adoption of innovations in the agriculture sector Numerous soil fertility and crop production technologies have been generated through research however wide adoption has been low African farmers need better technologies more sustainable practices and fertilizers to improve and sustain their crop productivity and to prevent further degradation of agricultural lands The agricultural sector also needs to be supported by functional institutions and policies that will be able to respond to emerging challenges of globalization and climate change

Progress and Prospects in the Management of Oxyanion Polluted Aqua Systems Nurudeen A.

Oladoja, Emmanuel I. Unuabonah, 2021-07-01 This book is a compendium of research efforts and findings on the sources occurrences hydrochemistry and several operating variables that influence the presence of oxyanions in aqua system The content of this book has been designed to provide an insightful account of an array of innovative technologies for the management of the impacts of oxyanions in water the progress and drawbacks of these technologies and those that have been effectively deployed to transform oxyanions in water to beneficial species This book further x rays global laws and economic policies targeted at effectively curtailing the presence of harmful oxyanions in water challenges facing these policies and future perspectives on how best to reduce the level of these harmful oxyanions in water to safe limit The book is relevant to water professionals policy makers academics and research students      Nitrogen Cycling in West African Ecosystems Thomas Rosswall, 1980      Advances in Soil Science , 2013-03-07 The world needs for food and fiber continue to increase Population growth in the developing countries peaked at 2.4 percent a year in 1965 and has fallen to about 2.1 percent However in many developing countries almost half the people are under 15 years of age poised to enter their productive and reproductive years The challenges to produce enough food for this growing population will remain great Even more challenging is growing the food in the areas of greatest need Presently the world has great surpluses of food and fiber in some areas while there are devastating deficiencies in other areas Economic conditions and the lack of suitable infrastructure for distribution all too often limit the alleviation of hunger even when there are adequate supplies sometimes even within the country itself World hunger can only be solved in the long run by increasing crop production in the areas where the population is growing most rapidly This will require increased efforts of both the developed and developing countries Much of the technology that is so successful for crop production in the developed countries cannot be utilized directly in the developing countries Many of the principles however can and must be adapted to the conditions both physical and economic of the developing countries      Gaseous Loss of Nitrogen from Plant-soil System John Raymond Freney, James R.
