

Commercialisation of sport

What do I need to know?

- To identify the different types of media and sponsorship
- To understand how media and sponsorship influence physical activity and sport

Commercialisation: The management or exploitation of a person, organisation or activity in a way designed to make a profit.

In the space below, identify the three parts of the golden triangle, explain what media and sponsorship are, give examples of each.

How do the three parts of the golden triangle link?

- Popular sports have a positive impact on the media by increasing interest; the media can increase popularity of certain sports, other sports may become less popular due to lack of media coverage.
- Sports teams can receive funding which helps them to become successful, successful teams provide a platform for companies to promote products, companies/teams can lose their reputation/harmful if they are associated with an unpopular brand.
- Media coverage provides a platform for sponsors to promote products on a large scale, sponsors pay high prices to have adverts broadcast during popular sports events.

Identify the positives and negatives of media and sponsorship on sport/physical activity.

	Positives	Negatives
Media	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Takes sport to huge audiences. Coverage helps to increase interest. Helps increase prize money/parts question. Builds up tension before an event, providing spectators with something to get excited about. Helps turn sports people into role models. Brings money into the sport which helps pay for facilities, coaching, technology. Brings sponsors in, who in turn bring more money to the sport. Brings more money for wages, providing incentives for people, particularly people from poorer backgrounds, to work hard towards their sporting goals. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Increases pressure on performers to perform at their best, this may reduce enjoyment. Media scrutiny means that mistakes on and off the pitch are broadcast for all to see. Gives coverage to poor behaviour, this can impact younger people's behaviour. Creates a gap between popular and less popular sports in terms of media coverage, contributing towards the gender gap that still exists in sport. The media can influence opinion. Rules and timings of events are altered to fit in with media requirements. Spectators are required to pay large sums to watch sports. More competitive places huge physical demands on participants. Performers need to fulfil media obligations, like interviews, which can be a distraction.
Sponsorship	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Brings money into the sport which helps pay for facilities, coaching and technology. Allows performers participating in sports that receive less money from other sources to go professional. Allows events to be run without costs being passed on to teams or participants. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Can shift the focus from sport to business and money. Increases pressure on participants to perform at their best all the time, in order to retain their sponsorship, which may reduce their enjoyment. Sponsors may expect a say in how a sport, a tournament, a club or a performer's life is run. Successful teams/individuals are more attractive to sponsors, which widens the gap between the best and the second best. The good teams and individuals get better, while the poorer, second best teams and individuals continue to struggle. Participants can be overpaid, which creates a divided society.
