Encyclopaedia of World Architecture is a series of books describing all the seminal traditions of architecture from the earliest settlements of man to the stylistically and technologically sophisticated buildings of the twentieth century. It brings together the fruits of a lifetime of teaching and travelling the world by the renowned authors. Each volume sets the architectural style within their political, technological, social, and cultural contexts, exploring architecture not only as the development of form but as an expression of the civilization within which it evolved. The series focuses on the story of the different architectural traditions of the world from its origins in Mesopotamia and Egypt through its realization in ancient Greece and Rome to the Renaissance, Baroque, Gothic, Hellenic, to the Lombardic, from Moorish to Norman, French and Mexican, Colonial American to Military architecture in England. This thread is supplemented with detailed excursions to cover the development of architecture in India, South East Asia, and the Islamic world. An indispensable reference work for students of architecture and art history, practitioners or travelers, and for readers who want to understand the genesis of the buildings they see around them.

Encyclopedia of Twentieth Century Architecture R. Stephen Sennott, 2004. For more information, including the introduction, a full list of entries, and contributors, a generous selection of sample pages, and more, visit the Encyclopedia of 20th Century Architecture website. Focusing on architecture from all regions of the world, this three-volume set profiles the twentieth century's vast chronicle of architectural achievements both within and well beyond the theoretical confines of modernism. Unlike existing works, this encyclopedia examines the complexities of rapidly changing global conditions that have dispersed modern architectural types, movements, styles, and building practices across traditional geographic and cultural boundaries.
