Effective Graphic Communication:

Effective Graphic Communication Norbert Lloyd Enrick, 1972 Effective Communication in Organisations Michael Fielding, 2006 With a focus on outcomes based education this business communication manual caters to the needs of students of business communication at universities, technikons and private colleges with updated information on writing e mail messages and using the Internet. Adopting the premise that poor communication can cost an organization business and competitive status in the marketplace this text focuses on refining and clarifying the products of communication within the company and with the public. Particular focus is paid to interpersonal conversation in small groups, formal meetings and interviews, written clarity in internal business plans, e mails and memos, accessible materials for mass communication and public relations and rules of basic grammar and punctuation. Examples of all mentioned tools are provided along with the theory and practice of their use.

Effective Visual Representation Richard Prudenti, 2018 Landscape architecture lacks evidence based theory for the communicative effectiveness of graphics used in representing design ideas to stakeholders. For the purpose of this study, communicative effectiveness is operationalized as visual communication that expresses accurately the design in a way that the receiver understands the intentions, programmatic, experiential or otherwise of the design. People need graphic representation to grasp abstract concepts and drawings can help one imagine what a place can look like years down the road. Hester 2007 Graphics inform the viewer about essential elements of the design and the broader impact that design has on future experiences. Coe 1981 Knowing how people perceive and understand design graphics is key to communicating effectively to clients and other stakeholders. Graphic communication is complex and no formula exists for communication in landscape architecture. Kingery Page and Hahn 2012 Ware 2014 The questions guiding this study are: What graphic representation styles increase the non designers understanding of design proposals? Do degrees of abstraction or realism affect understanding of the design drawing? I identified three research phases to adequately answer the questions: Phase One Site Design Development I designed a site plan for the Manhattan Arts Center MAC, a community arts center in Manhattan, Kansas. Design intentions were carefully outlined based on stakeholder input. Phase Two Graphics Production Visual representations of the site design were developed in styles ranging from formal abstract to more realistic based on review of precedent images in academic and professional architectural publications. Phase Three Evaluation of Graphics Through Focus Groups The communicative effectiveness of the representations were tested through three focus groups of stakeholders. Content analysis of the recorded focus group sessions revealed patterns of understanding the graphics. Overall participants revealed that the more real the abstraction the less understanding takes place. Formal Abstraction communicates the physical dimensions of the design most effectively and Formal Abstraction has relatively the same communicative effectiveness regarding experience of place. Quantitative and qualitative data informed the creation of theories and a framework practitioners may use for selecting the most effective graphic communication options appropriate to project and
