Erling The Bold:

Erling the Bold R. M. Ballantyne, 2013-05-04 It happened that at this time one of the festivals of sacrifice was being celebrated by the people of the Drontheim country It was an old custom that when there was sacrifice all the bonders should come to the spot where the heathen temple stood and bring with them all that they required while the festival of the sacrifice lasted The men were expected to bring ale with them and all kinds of cattle as well as horses which were to be slaughtered boiled and eaten

Erling the Bold Robert Michael Ballantyne, 2017-01-08 This is a tale of a Sea rover or Viking as they are called In the author's own words The present tale is founded chiefly on the information conveyed in that most interesting work by Snorro Sturleson The Heimskringla or Chronicles of the Kings of Norway It is translated from the Icelandic On perceiving the intention of the Danes to attack him Erling's heart was glad because he now felt sure that to some extent he had them in his power If they had on his first appearance taken to their ships they might have easily escaped or some of the smaller vessels might have pulled up the river and attacked his ship which in that case would have had to meet them on unequal terms but now that they were about to attack him on land he knew that he could keep them in play as long as he pleased and that if they should on the appearance of reinforcements again make for their ships he could effectively harass them and retard their embarkation
