improving patient safety through the design of a safer health system This volume reveals the often startling statistics of medical error and the disparity between the incidence of error and public perception of it given many patients expectations that the medical profession always performs perfectly A careful examination is made of how the surrounding forces of legislation regulation and market activity influence the quality of care provided by health care organizations and then looks at their handling of medical mistakes Using a detailed case study the book reviews the current understanding of why these mistakes happen A key theme is that legitimate liability concerns discourage reporting of errors which begs the question How can we learn from our mistakes Balancing regulatory versus market based initiatives and public versus private efforts the Institute of Medicine presents wide ranging recommendations for improving patient safety in the areas of leadership improved data collection and analysis and development of effective systems at the level of direct patient care To Err Is Human asserts that the problem is not bad people in health care it is that good people are working in bad systems that need to be made safer Comprehensive and straightforward this book offers a clear prescription for raising the level of patient safety in American health care It also explains how patients themselves can influence the quality of care that they receive once they check into the hospital This book will be vitally important to federal state and local health policy makers and regulators health professional licensing officials hospital administrators medical educators and students health caregivers health journalists patient advocates as well as patients themselves First in a series of publications from the Quality of Health Care in America a project initiated by the Institute of Medicine

A patient safety movement that began with a 1999 Institute of Medicine report on the prevalence of preventable medical errors has spawned both policy to change health care systems and a growing body of literature aimed at understanding the causes of such errors A 2003 AHRQ systematic review investigated the role that workplace conditions play in explaining patient safety and found that workloads work schedules lengths of work shifts and stress levels affected rates of non fatal adverse outcomes mortality rates medication errors and other patient safety measures However much of this evidence relies on studies based in hospitals and focuses on nurse and resident staffing or is based on studies in non healthcare settings A large body of evidence has shown clear linkages between workplace conditions and employee satisfaction and stress in a wide variety of organizational and industry settings In the healthcare industry increasing interest in understanding these linkages has stemmed from the idea that healthcare providers working environments also affect important patient outcomes including safety quality of care and satisfaction Additionally meeting objectives of the current healthcare reform to increase healthcare quality by increasing the availability of primary care providers and making care safer more efficient effective and patient centered hinges on the ability to deal with the documented shortage of primary care providers in the U S and at the same time improve patient outcomes The purpose of this report is to systematically review the evidence on the role of primary care providers workplace conditions in influencing patient outcomes The focus on primary care providers work environment will provide evidence on increasing healthcare quality While the focus of this review is on patient outcomes we do discuss implications for providers and recent review studies that highlight the importance of provider wellness as a component of high quality care Results from this review may inform policymakers as they endeavor to implement aspects of the healthcare reform related to increasing the supply of primary care providers and improving patient outcomes Following the 2003 AHRQ report we focused on the following workplace conditions 1 human resource practices 2 organizational culture and 3 physical environment but restricted our review to studies on primary care providers physicians physician assistants and nurse practitioners in ambulatory care settings Note that the workplace condition constructs specifically human resources practices and organizational culture may overlap However our categorization of these workplace conditions does not affect the evidence presented it merely serves as a way to organize a long list of workplace conditions We conceptualized primary or ambulatory care to include clinics and providers that serve as a first point of contact for patients where common illnesses and conditions are treated Therefore we excluded studies that focused on one specific disease even chronic conditions that may be managed by a primary care provider or one specific patient population e g diabetics The key questions were 1 How are human resources HR practices such as skill levels training workload hours worked autonomy and electronic medical records systems associated with patient outcomes a quality of care access and effectiveness b safety medication errors c patient satisfaction with provider with clinic practice 2 How are other working conditions such as organizational culture or physical environment associated with patient outcomes a quality of care access and effectiveness b safety medication errors c patient satisfaction with provider with clinic practice 3 In studies that report provider outcomes how are working conditions associated with provider outcomes e g job satisfaction productivity pay "I'm Sorry to Hear that ..." Susan Keane
