Economic Analysis Of Production Price Indexes:

Economic Analysis of Production Price Indexes Franklin M. Fisher, Karl Shell, 1997-11-13 This is a book on the theory behind the construction of production index numbers Well known examples of such indexes are the Gross Domestic Product the Producer Price Index and labor productivity Fisher and Shell provide the analysis behind this class of index numbers They treat separately the different production units and different forms of industrial organization They show the direction of bias in traditionally calculated index numbers and how biases can affect fundamental conclusions about the growth or stagnation of the economy

A Practical Guide to Price Index and Hedonic Techniques Ana M. Aizcorbe, 2014-06-12 This book provides an accessible guide to price index and hedonic techniques with a focus on how to best apply these techniques and interpret the resulting measures One goal of this book is to provide first hand experience at constructing these measures with guidance on practical issues such as what the ideal data would look like and how best to construct these measures when the data are less than ideal A related objective is to fill the wide gulf between the necessarily simplistic elementary treatments in textbooks and the very complex discussions found in the theoretical and empirical measurement literature Here the theoretical results are summarized in an intuitive way and their numerical importance is illustrated using data and results from existing studies Finally while the aim of much of the existing literature is to better understand official price indexes like the Consumer Price Index the emphasis here is more practical to provide the needed tools for individuals to apply these techniques on their own As new datasets become increasingly accessible tools like these will be needed to obtain summary price measures Indeed these techniques have been applied for years in antitrust cases that involve pricing where economic experts typically have access to large granular datasets
