Resources: From Regulation to Privatization Nicolas Spulber, Asghar Sabbaghi, 2013-03-14 The purpose of this book is to develop a general economic model which integrates the quantity and quality issues of water resource management and to provide along with a detailed criticism of the policy instruments now in use alternative proposals concerning the efficient allocation and distribution of water In particular we treat water as a multi product commodity where the market plays a major role in determining water quality discriminant pricing and its value to the user We examine the process of moving from administrative allocation and regulation to privatization of the water industry as the key element in promoting effective competition and in providing economic incentives for greater efficiency Water quantity and quality considered independently of each other have been the subject of numerous studies during the last twenty years Let us recall briefly the most outstanding among them A variety of models have been constructed concerning the optimal scheduling and sequence of water supply projects dynamic programming for solving multi bjective functions in water resource development planning models for coordinating regional water resource supply and demand etc Other studies have devised water quality management models including multi period design of regional or municipal wastewater systems cost allocation methods to induce effluent dischargers to participate in regional water systems models to predict the quality of effluent in particular whether it meets certain established standards models for finding optimal waste removal policies at each of the polluting sources and so on

Economics of water resources planning Leonard Douglas James,1970 Water Resources Project Economics Edward Kuiper,1971 Water Resources Research Catalog ,1966 Current Issues in the Economics of Water Resource Management P. Pashardes,T.M. Swanson,A. Xepapadeas,2013-04-17 The marginal price elasticities estimated by Martinez Espineira conforms to expectation The price specification that accounts for the changing proportion of water users in each block yields a higher elasticity 0.47 compared to the specification ignoring this feature of the data However this difference is not found to be statistically significant a result attributed to the low power of the test small sample size limiting the accuracy of estimates In conclusion the paper provides a theoretically correct price specification for demand functions under block pricing and aggregate data The empirical findings in the paper however are not conclusive and further empirical work using more data and alternative nonlinear demand functions is needed to show the practical implications of the arguments put forward by the Martinez Espineira's paper Static empirical consumer demand functions estimated with aggregate data are well known to suffer from serial correlation and other statistical problems associated with misspecified dynamics These dynamics arise because consumers do not react immediately to a change in prices due to their largely predetermined lifestyle In the case of demand for water for example current purchases can be largely predetermined due to commitments arising from past purchases such as swimming pools bathtubs dishwashing machines etc Muellbauer and Pashardes 1992 show that the autoregressive nature of consumer demand data can be captured in a theoretically consistent manner by incorporating intertemporal aspects of consumer behaviour in the model through habit formation and durability
