Effect Of Fluorine Containing Emissions On Conifers:

The Effect of Fluorine-Containing Emissions on Conifers Anatoly S. Rozhkov, Tatyana A. Mikhailova, 2012-12-06

Preservation of nature and the environment has become one of the most important issues of the end of the twentieth century. It has become evident that the methods used for industrial and agricultural production in many countries produce pollutants that cannot undergo natural neutralization by entering the atmosphere, soil or water. Ecosystems that have been developing for centuries are undergoing degradation and what is even more regrettable is that there is an actual threat of profound disorder in the biosphere which could lead to heavy and irreversible changes. Fluorine derivatives are the most aggressive among toxic compounds polluting the atmosphere. Moreover, the percentage of fluorides in industrial emissions is constantly increasing with the bulk of fluorides being emitted by aluminium smelters. Fluorine is poorly detoxified by both plants and animals and the accumulation of even relatively low concentrations over a long period causes a cumulative toxic effect. Among woody plants, conifers are less resistant to fluorine. Fluorine derivatives as phytopollutants have been studied less than sulphur compounds, nitrogen oxides, chlorine and hydrogen chloride. It was not until the late 1960s when there was a rapid decline of coniferous forests that researchers directed their attention towards phyto-toxic properties of fluorides.

Impacts of Point Polluters on Terrestrial Biota Mikhail Kozlov, Elena Zvereva, Vitali Zverev, 2009-07-28. The adverse consequences of pollution impact on terrestrial ecosystems have been under careful investigation since the beginning of the twentieth century. Several thousand case studies have documented the biotic effects occurring in contaminated areas. However, after more than a century of research, ecologists are still far from understanding the effects of pollution on biota. Only a few generalisations have been made on the basis of extensive monitoring programs and numerous experiments with industrial contaminants. The need to reveal general patterns in the responses of terrestrial biota to industrial pollution and to identify the sources of variation in these responses became obvious more than a decade ago. At about that time, our team initiated a quantitative research synthesis of the biotic effects caused by industrial pollution based on 1 a meta-analysis of published data. All meta-analyses conducted so far covering diversity and abundance of soil microfungi, diversity of vascular plants, diversity and abundance of terrestrial arthropods and plant growth and reproduction consistently showed high heterogeneity in the responses of terrestrial biota to industrial pollution. At the same time, they demonstrated an unexpected shortage of information suitable for meta-analyses as well as a considerable influence of methodology of primary studies on the outcome of the research syntheses. To overcome the identified problems, we designed a comparative study the results of which are reported in this book.

The Fluoride Deception Christopher Bryson, 2011-01-04. With the narrative punch of Jonathan Harr's A Civil Action and the commitment to environmental truth telling of Erin Brockovich's The Fluoride Deception, this book documents a powerful connection between big corporations, the U.S. military and the historic reassurances of fluoride safety provided by the nation's public health establishment. The Fluoride Deception reads like a thriller but one supported by two hundred pages of source notes years of investigative reporting scores of scientist interviews and archival research in places such as the newly opened files of the Manhattan Project and the Atomic Energy Commission The book is nothing less than an exhumation of one of the great secret narratives of the industrial era how a grim workplace poison and the most damaging environmental pollutant of the cold war was added to our drinking water and toothpaste Fluoride and Fluorocarbon
