Fuel For Thought An Environmental Strategy For The Energy Sector:

Fuel for Thought, 1998 Fuel for Thought, 2000 Energy is basic to development People in developing countries attach a high priority to energy services spending nearly 12 per cent of income on energy more than five times the average for people in OECD countries Yet provision of those services can have adverse environmental effects especially as developing countries are often forced to rely on the most inefficient and polluting sources of energy This report sets out the challenge arising from growth in energy demand and its impact on the environment analyses the World Bank's current policies and strategy outlines a new strategy and explains how it could be implemented Sustainable Development and Innovation in the Energy Sector Ulrich Steger, Wouter Achterberg, Kornelis Blok, Henning Bode, Walter Frenz, Corinna Gather, Gerd Hanekamp, Dieter Imboden, Matthias Jahnke, Michael Kost, Rudi Kurz, Hans Gottfried Nutzinger, Thomas Ziesemer, 2005-08-09 Almost every energy scenario assumes an enormous growth in the demand for energy in the coming decades Meanwhile at international conferences and other venues the primary concern is massive reduction of greenhouse gas emissions especially of the CO₂ produced by fossil fuel energy consumption Experts also point out the political risk of depending on petroleum and remind us of the fact that resources are not inexhaustible This timely book explores how these conflicting scenarios could be reconciled how can we shape a more sustainable energy system from the existing one and possible technological progress and innovations to enable a brighter future It also addresses the reality that there exists no consensus on the extent to which innovations can really contribute to reconciling ever growing energy consumption availability of resources and the environment and the structural demands on any energy system Climate Change and Developing Countries Nijavalli H. Ravindranath, Jayant A. Sathaye, 2005-12-16 Among global environmental issues climate change has received the largest attention of national and global policy makers researchers industry multilateral banks and NGOs Climate change is one of the most important global environmental problems with unique characteristics It is global long term up to several centuries and involves complex interactions between climatic environmental economic political institutional and technological pressures It is of great significance to developing countries as all the available knowledge suggests that they and particularly their poorer inhabitants are highly vulnerable to climate impacts The projected warming of 1.4 to 5.8 °C by 2100 and the related changes in rainfall pattern rise in sea level and increased frequency of extreme events such as drought hurricanes and storms are likely to threaten food security increase fresh water scarcity lead to decline in biodiversity increase occurrence of vector borne diseases cause flooding of coastal settlements etc Recognizing the potential threat of severe disruptions the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development was organized in 1992 in Rio de Janeiro Brazil to begin to address ways to reduce these impacts which led to the formulation of the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change This Convention and the subsequent Kyoto Protocol recognize the common but differentiated responsibility of developing and industrialized countries in addressing climate change Developing countries thus have a unique role to play in formulating a sound reasoned and well informed response to the threat of climate change Balancing the Development Agenda Ruth Kagia, 2005-01-01 Examines the evolution of the World Bank and its operations during the presidency of James Wolfensohn

A Guide to the World Bank, 2003 The World Bank Group works in more than 100 developing economies and is one of the world's largest sources of development assistance In 2002 the institution provided US 19.5 billion in loans to its client countries This guide reviews the organisation's history objectives and operations and looks at the five institutions that make up the World Bank Group the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development IBRD the International Development Association IDA the International Finance Corporation IFC the Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency MIGA and the International Centre for Settlement of Investment Disputes ICSID Environmental Security and India Satabdi

Das, 2022-08-26 This book examines environmental issues through the lens of security studies and presents a comprehensive analysis of Indian policy in dealing with threats posed by climate change This book Puts forward theoretical base for securitization of environmental issues incorporating different schools of thought Presents a survey of global environmental politics in general and the effects of climate change and its consequences for India's national security in particular Examines the politics involved in India's environmental policy at both the domestic and international levels Outlines key policy takeaways and possibilities for action that can help contain the threat of environmental change A comprehensive guide to a new and emerging dimension in Indian security policy this book will be essential reading for students and researchers of international relations security studies especially non traditional security public policy especially environmental policy and area studies World Development Indicators 2009 World Bank, 2009-01-01 Looking for accurate up to date data on

Saharan Africa the World Bank's mission to fight poverty is strongly linked with environmental protection and better management of renewable natural resources In both rural and urban areas the poor of Africa are impacted by the loss of natural resources and environmental services They are also at the highest risk from natural disasters most particularly floods and drought This environmental strategy report identifies the current thinking of the Africa region within the World Bank Group It helps detail the World Bank's commitment to assist African countries make the transition to sustainable economic development by implementing improved management of natural resources and the environment The World Bank Manorama Gotur,2000 Climate Change Program Study 2004 , World Development Indicators 2007 ,2007-01-01 World Development Indicators is the World Bank's premier annual compilation of data about development This indispensable statistical reference allows you to consult over 900 indicators for some 150 economies and 14 country groups in more than 80 tables It provides a current overview of the most recent data available as well as important regional data and income group analysis in six thematic sections World View People Environment Economy States and Markets and Global Links The CD ROM editions contain 45 years of time series data covering 1960 to 2005 and offer mapping charting and data export formats Click below for more information on the CD ROM editions Environmental Health and Traditional Fuel Use in Guatemala Kulsum Ahmed,2005-01-01 There is a growing recognition of the harmful effects of indoor air pollution on health with recent WHO estimates indicating that indoor smoke from solid fuels causes 1.6 million deaths annually and accounts for 2.7 percent of the global burden of disease This publication examines the adverse health impacts of indoor air pollution particularly on children from fuel use in Guatemala where the vast majority of poor rural households use fuelwood as the dominant cooking fuel It draws on case studies of improved stove programmes to highlight the problem and to explore technical mitigation measures and policy options to improve accessibility to cleaner fuels Making Sustainable Commitments ,2001-01-01 CD ROM includes full text of the Strategy as well as other relevant information Climate Change and the World Bank Group ,2009-01-01 Kenneth Chomitz was the evaluation manager and main author for this study P xiii Canadian Energy Policy and the Struggle for Sustainable Development G. Bruce Doern,2005-01-01 In recent years energy policy has been increasingly linked to concepts of sustainable development In this timely collection editor G. Bruce Doern presents an overview of Canadian energy policy gathering together the top Canadian scholars in the field in an examination of the twenty year period broadly benchmarked by energy liberalization and free trade in the mid 1980s and by Canada's ratification of the Kyoto Protocol in 2002 The contributors examine issues including electricity restructuring in the wake of the August 2003 blackout the implications of the Bush Administration's energy policies energy security northern pipelines and Aboriginal energy issues provincial changes in energy policy and overall federal provincial changes in regulatory governance They also demonstrate that since per capita energy usage has actually increased in the past several years sustainable development remains very much a struggle rather than an achievement When the Kyoto Protocol and its requirements for reductions in greenhouse gas emissions are factored in the Canadian record is especially dubious in basic energy terms Canadian Energy Policy and the Struggle for Sustainable Development is key to understanding many of the issues in Canada's endeavour to live up to its energy related environmental responsibilities World Development Indicators, 1983
