

Tutorial Week 1: What are Fundamental Rights in Europe?

In this week's tutorial, we take as a case study the application of human rights to the regulation of migration in Europe. We address the development of human rights and we reflect on their legal, political and social significance. We identify duty bearers in human rights law (primarily states) and we distinguish the sorts of obligations states have under human rights law (respect, protect, fulfill). Moreover, we deal with the legal orders that provide human rights protection in Europe (ECHR, EU and national law) and we stress how important it is to distinguish between these orders while also paying attention to their interaction.

We also recap some of the doctrines that have already been addressed in Beginnenden Europäischen Recht and Staatsrecht, such as the EU law doctrine of direct effect and the concepts of monism and dualism for the legal effects of international law in domestic law. After this week, you must be able to (learning aims):

- Describe the development of fundamental rights in Europe
- Reflect on the legal, political and social significance of human rights
- Differentiate between different sorts of human rights obligations (respect, protect and fulfill)
- Distinguish between the legal orders of the Council of Europe and the EU
- Explain the role of the ECHR in the EU legal order
- Read judgments of the European Court of Human Rights (ECtHR) and the Court of Justice of the EU (CJEU).
