The Limits of Convergence Mauro F. Guillén, 2010-07-01 This book challenges the widely accepted notion that globalization encourages economic convergence and by extension cultural homogenization across national borders A systematic comparison of organizational change in Argentina South Korea and Spain since 1950 finds that global competition forces countries to exploit their distinctive strengths resulting in unique development trajectories Analyzing the social political and economic conditions underpinning the rise of various organizational forms Guillén shows that business groups small enterprises and foreign multinationals play different economic roles depending on a country's path to development Business groups thrive when there is foreign trade and investment protectionism and are best suited to undertake large scale capital intensive activities such as automobile assembly and construction Their growth and diversification come at the expense of smaller firms and foreign multinationals In contrast small and medium enterprises are best fitted to compete in knowledge intensive activities such as component manufacturing and branded consumer goods They prosper in the absence of restrictions on export oriented multinationals The book ends on an optimistic note by presenting evidence that it is possible though not easy for countries to break through the glass ceiling separating poor from rich It concludes that globalization encourages economic diversity and that democracy is the form of government best suited to deal with globalization's contingencies Against those who contend that the transition to markets must come before the transition to ballots Guillén argues that democratization can and should precede economic modernization This is applied economic sociology at its best broad topical full of interesting political implications and critical of the conventional wisdom

Multinationals, Clusters and Innovation A. Tavares, A. Teixeira, 2006-07-11 Countries adopt policies that attract foreign multinationals stimulate industrial clustering and foster innovation This book links these topical issues examining activities of multinational enterprises alongside the efficiency appropriateness and sufficiency of such policies With new empirical evidence it makes practical proposals throughout Multinationals and Industrial Competitiveness John H. Dunning, Rajneesh Narula, 2005-01-01 This book provides an excellent overview of the changing relationship between multinationals and economic development as globalization has taken off and substantially altered the conditions for catching up as opposed to falling behind. The authors move very effectively between the discussion of concepts that are crucial to understanding such changes and various empirical evidence on foreign direct investment, trade, inter-firm relationships, institutional settings and competitiveness. John Cantwell, Rutgers University, US. The globalisation of the world economy has undermined many of the old certainties regarding foreign direct investment flows. Dunning and Narula use the concepts of alliance capitalism and technological evolution to analyse recent trends in international business. They identify the challenges to government policymakers from regional integration and the consequent intensification of political competition to attract high technology investment. This masterful and incisive analysis brings great clarity to perplexing issues and delineates a cogent industrial policy agenda for a globalised economy. Mark Casson, University of Reading, UK. This book offers an important contribution to the contemporary debate on the role of multinational enterprises (MNEs) in economic development in an increasingly globalizing, knowledge-intensive and alliance-based world economy. Each of the chapters touches upon critical issues now facing the global economy. They also address the growing importance of innovative activities of firms in promoting economic development and industrial restructuring, as well as the role of FDI and cooperative agreements in furthering this goal. Emphasis is placed on the increasingly significant role of national governments in promoting the intellectual capital of their indigenous resources and capabilities and of inter-firm collaborative alliances. Globalization and technological advances are reconfiguring the ingredients of the competitiveness of firms and nation-states. They are emphasizing the increasingly important role of both private and social institutions as determinants of the success of corporations and of the economic development of societies. Covering a range of issues from economic development, alliance capitalism, government policies, regional integration and industrial development, this authoritative book will greatly appeal to academics and economists, especially those interested in international business and management.
