The Glorious Enterprise John Maass, 1973 Marble Palaces, Temples of Art Ingrid A. Steffensen-Bruce, 1998 The era from 1890 to 1930 constituted a building boom for American art museums designed in a monumental classical style both the proliferation of the buildings and the ubiquity of the style seem to indicate an architectural as well as a sociocultural phenomenon The present work is an attempt to place the American art museum building of this period into its historical milieu and employs over one hundred illustrations and sociocultural analysis to explain the significance of both the institutions and the structures housing them to those who came into regular contact with them including architects patrons journalists and museum personnel Sundae Best Anne Cooper Funderburg, 2002 This book is the first comprehensive documented history of this popular institution which millions of Americans fondly remember For 150 years the soda fountain was a community social center In big cities the neighborhood fountain had a clubby atmosphere because it drew its clientele from nearby businesses and apartment buildings In small towns soda fountains were very democratic because they attracted all ages and all classes of people In both cities and small towns soda fountains were part of the social infrastructure that held the neighborhood together The evolution of the soda fountain reflected momentous developments in American history urbanization the temperance movement and Prohibition the Great Depression technological progress the decline of Main Street and Center City the Car Culture and the growth of suburbia The fountain's evolution was also closely tied to trends in retailing food service lifestyles and the decorative arts Designing the Centennial Bruno Giberti, 2021-03-17 The 1876 United States Centennial Exhibition in Philadelphia was not only the United States first important world's fair it signaled significant changes in the very shape of knowledge Quarrels between participants in the exhibition represented a greater conflict as the world transitioned between two different kinds of modernity the Enlightenment of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries to the High Modern period of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries At the center of this movement was a shift in the perceived relationship between seeing and knowing and in the perception of what makes an object valuable its usefulness as a subject of study and learning versus its ability to be bought and sold on the market Arguments over design of the Centennial reflected these opposing viewpoints Initial plans were rigidly structured dividing the exhibits by country and type But as some exhibitors became more interested in the preferences of their audience they adopted a more modern stance Objects traditionally displayed in isolated glass boxes were placed in fictive context the necklace draped over a mannequin the vase set on a table in a model room As a result the audience could more easily perceive these items as commodities suitable for their own environments and the fair as a place to find ideas for a material lifestyle Designing the Centennial is a vital first look at the design process and the nature of the display Bruno Giberti uses official reports of the U S Centennial Commission and photographs of the Centennial Photographic Company as well as the ephemera of the exhibition and literary accounts in books magazines and newspapers to illuminate how the 1876 fair revealed changes to

Fairmount Park that spring and summer were the physical embodiments of this culture The sights the sounds and even the smells of the exhibition presaged the coming of a modern America In 1876 Philadelphia was the nation s largest manufacturing city and Pennsylvania one of the most important industrial states The exposition can serve as a wonderful lens to examine America s shift from the young agricultural republic of 1800 to the industrial empire of 1900
