Globalization And Regional Dynamics:

Globalization and Regional Dynamics Wolfgang Klenner, Hisashi Watanabe, 2012-12-06 The writings by Japanese and German economists presented here originated against the backdrop of ongoing globalization processes and notable fluctuations in regional economic dynamics observable at the same time primarily in the East and South East Asian area. They provided the occasion for these writers to come to terms with globalization processes and in particular with the stabilizing and destabilizing elements at work in them. This is the basis for their investigation of the options provided by economics and economic policy for stabilizing an ever more tightly interwoven world economy. The regional focal points of the contributions are the East Asian realm and the European Union and the points of view are in every case both from the Japanese and the German side. Questions of international competition and mechanisms of the spread of the crisis in the wake of globalization processes lie at the centre of the analyses by Hisashi Watanabe and Willy Kraus. Hisashi Watanabe focusses on the relationship, an especially important one from the Japanese perspective between Japan and South Korea and takes up the problem of South Korea's demand that Japan should energetically promote its own transition to a service sector oriented society and withdraw from certain areas of manufacturing. This, it is argued, will grant Japan's Asian neighbours better chances for development and make a positive contribution to the economic stabilization of the region. Globalization and Regional Economic Modeling Russel Cooper, Kieran Donaghy, Geoffrey Hewings, 2007-09-23 Globalization is affecting regional economies in a broad spectrum of aspects from labor market conditions and development policies to climate change. To understand better how this works we need both conceptual and methodological contributions. We need new schemes to organize our thinking, direct our attention and frame thought experiments on the basis of which guidance may be offered. And we need methodological innovations that enable us to carry out studies and thought experiments at levels of spatial and temporal resolution and formal complexity adequate to capture and account for the phenomena that characterize globalization. The chapters of this volume written by an international cast of eminent regional scientists represent contributions of both types in many cases introducing and demonstrating the use of new tools for analyzing and understanding enormous changes underway in regional economies around the world. Globalization and Regional Growth in Europe Roberta Capello, Ugo Fratesi, Laura Resmini, 2011-05-27 After a description of the new forms of globalization currently shaping our world and of their possible spatial effects, the book highlights which European regions have in the past succeeded in taking advantage of globalization trends and identifies the major reasons for their success. The book also offers a prospective analysis utilizing scenarios based on different assumptions of how globalization trends will develop, identifying the regional winners and losers for each scenario. The analysis greatly benefits from a unique database which contains among others data on FDI by sector and professions at the regional NUTS 2 level for all 27 EU countries. A time span of more than 10 years is covered and scenarios are developed for the future development up to 2020.

Globalization Trends and Regional Development Roberta Capello, Tomaz Ponce Dentinho, 2012-01-01 Global trends and local effects have been almost ubiquitous since the 1980s. However, few like this book have successfully examined the local effects of global trends and processes. Each of this book's ten chapters provides an empirically based analysis that illuminates the local effects driven by global forces. Roger Stough, George Mason University, US. This timely book investigates the challenges that emerge for local economies when faced with the new globalization trends that characterize today's world economy. In this instance, globalization is interpreted as a process of internationalization of production and markets which can take various forms such as increasing international trade or increasing foreign direct investments, all of which give rise to the growing integration and interdependency of European economies with regard to the other main world economies. The expert contributors use a fresh perspective in their analysis of globalization trends, emphasizing recent changes and providing an up-to-date picture of current developments in both foreign investments and the consequent migration of human capital. Qualitative rather than quantitative trends in human capital and financial capital flows are taken into account with a particular focus on their impacts on regional growth perspectives. Highlighting the European economy's strengths and weaknesses in facing the challenges of the new globalization trends, this book will provide a stimulating read for a wide-ranging audience encompassing scholars of regional science, regional economics, economic and regional geography, international economics and international business.

Dynamics of Globalization Torben Pedersen, Christian Geisler Asmussen, Timothy Devinney, Laszlo Tihanyi, 2011-06-09 Cross-border flows of goods, services, capital, knowledge and ideas have substantially increased. This book focuses on how the interface between firm-specific advantages, liability of foreignness and location-specific advantages are spelled out in the more global world.

immigrants in Korea Globalizing Regional Development in East Asia Henry Wai-chung Yeung, 2013-09-13 Significant historical and geographical differences account for the many processes and trajectories of regional development in East Asia. These historical and geographical specificities in East Asia have prompted serious re-examination of existing theories in regional development and in particular the new regionalism approach associated with such ideas as the learning region, institutional thickness, relational assets, and regional innovation system. This book brings together a group of leading researchers specializing in local and regional development in East Asian economies. Through in-depth empirical studies of specific regions and localities, these authors offer fresh and innovative perspectives on how regions evolve and develop over time in the world's most dynamic macro regional economy. In particular, their work points to the critical importance of local and trans-local processes in shaping regional development trajectories. The book is timely given that the debate on the nature and dynamics of regional development in both academic and policy circles has now moved on. From the earlier focus on endogenous regional assets such as localized networks of association and trust, scholars and policymakers are now analyzing the complex relationship between economic globalization and regional change. This high-calibre collection makes a significant contribution to the literature on local and regional development in Asia and provides an important resource for researchers, students, and policy makers interested in East Asia. This book was published as a special issue of Regional Studies.
