Wetland and Riparian Areas of the Intermountain West Mark C. McKinstry, Wayne A. Hubert, Stanley H. Anderson, 2010-01-01 Wetlands and riparian areas between the Rocky Mountains and the Sierra Nevada are incredibly diverse and valuable habitats More than 80 percent of the wildlife species in this intermountain region depend on these wetlands which account for less than 2 percent of the land area for their survival At the same time the wetlands also serve the water needs of ranchers and farmers recreationists vacation communities and cities It is no exaggeration to call water the liquid gold of the West and the burgeoning human demands on this scarce resource make it imperative to understand and properly manage the wetlands and riverine areas of the Intermountain West This book offers land managers biologists and research scientists a state of the art survey of the ecology and management practices of wetland and riparian areas in the Intermountain West Twelve articles examine such diverse issues as laws and regulations affecting these habitats the unique physiographic features of the region the importance of wetlands and riparian areas to fish wildlife and livestock the ecological function of these areas their value to humans and the methods to evaluate these habitats The authors also address the human impacts on the land from urban and suburban development mining grazing energy extraction recreation water diversions and timber harvesting and suggest ways to mitigate such impacts Aquatic Habitat Assessment Mark B. Bain, Nathalie J. Stevenson, 1999 Abstract Habitat is now the basis of most impact assessments and resource inventories and it is the basis of many species management plans mitigation planning and environmental regulation Habitats are relatively stable through time easily defined in intuitive physical terms and provide a tangible resource for negotiations and decision making Numerous and varied methods of analyzing and reporting habitat conditions have been developed by federal state provincial and private agencies Habitat assessment approaches vary greatly among regions of the continent The great variability in methods and an unusually wide range of practices have impeded the ability of agencies to share and synthesize information. A diversity of methods is desirable in the initial stages of a rapidly developing field but enough time has passed to assess the state of knowledge and identify the best of the currently used methods and techniques. This manual is intended to provide fisheries biologists with a limited set of techniques for obtaining aquatic habitat data. The manual also describes the range of information collected and used in agency habitat analyses. Agencies planning habitat programs should review the synthesis of established and documented methods being used in North America. Appendix 1 and the planning recommendations in Chapter 2. Then the remaining chapters should be reviewed to determine what types of habitat data should be included in the agency's program. The Instream Flow Incremental Methodology Clair B. Stalnaker, 1995

Mid-Atlantic Freshwater Wetlands: Advances in Wetlands Science, Management, Policy, and Practice Robert P. Brooks, Denise Heller Wardrop, 2013-01-25 The lands and waters of the Mid Atlantic Region (MAR) have changed significantly since before the 16th century when the Susquehannock lived in the area. Much has changed since Captain John Smith penetrated the estuaries and rivers during the early 17th century since the surveying of the Mason Dixon Line to settle border disputes among Maryland, Pennsylvania and Delaware during the middle of the 18th century and since J. Thomas Scharf described the physiographic setting of Baltimore County in the late 19th century. As early as 1881 Scharf provides us with an assessment of the condition of the aquatic ecosystems of the region albeit in narrative form and already changes are taking place: the conversion of forests to fields, the founding of towns and cities and the depletion of natural resources. We have always conducted our work with the premise that man is part of and not apart from this ecosystem and landscape. This premise and the historical changes in our landscape provide the foundation for our overarching research question: how do human activities impact the functioning of aquatic ecosystems and the ecosystem services that they provide and how can we optimize this relationship? Aquatic Synthesis for Voyageurs National Park, 2003 Voyageurs National Park. VOYA in northern Minnesota contains significant aquatic resources including 30 lakes and numerous wetlands. This synthesis contains an integrated account of what is known about the aquatic resources of VOYA, compares VOYA resources to those of other areas and identifies opportunities and needs for future studies and surveys. Surveys and studies in VOYA have identified fifty-four fish species from 16 families, 820 vascular plant species and 7 amphibian and 3 reptile species; higher numbers probably occur. Estimates of relative abundance for phyto and zooplankton vary among VOYA lakes and depths surveyed. The VOYA fish populations and communities have been the most intensively studied. Twenty-eight percent of VOYA wetlands are the result of beaver activity. Mercury contamination and its food chain bioaccumulation in VOYA are of particular concern. An integrated monitoring plan is needed in VOYA to provide continuous data and information on the complex physical, chemical and biological factors that influence aquatic systems. Resource managers in VOYA will use this information to understand and explain observed changes and to predict the potential for future changes. San Bernardino National Forest (N.F.),
