The Literate Mind Andy Wells, 2017-09-16 Literacy is about 5 000 years old Since it was invented it has transformed human societies and knowledge fundamentally Indeed civilisation is built on literacy What is it about the process of making marks on paper or other surfaces that gives literacy this remarkable power The Literate Mind A Study of Its Scope and Limitations proposes that the evolved pre literate qualities of the human mind combined with the representational capacities of alphabets and other symbol systems provide uniquely powerful means for the generation and storage of knowledge The creation storage and sharing of texts augment the social and cognitive capacities of human minds and allow us to develop social institutions within which further new knowledge can be deployed and used Taking an approach that is equally applicable to print and digital media the book draws on evolutionary theory and the theory of computation to explain the remarkable power of literacy and its transformational effects on human society and knowledge It demonstrates that the universe of possible texts is infinite in extent and proposes that the combination of a reader and a text can be treated as an ecosystem of unlimited scope

Hubbell, Natsuko Akagawa, Sol Rojas-Lizana, Annie Pohlman, 2020-10-31 This volume explores the relationship between place traumatic memory and narrative Drawing on cases from Africa Asia Europe Oceania and North and South America the book provides a uniquely cross cultural and global approach Covering a wide range of cultural and linguistic contexts the volume is divided into three parts memorial spaces sites of trauma and traumatic representations The contributions explore how acknowledgement of past suffering is key to the complex inter relationship between the politics of memory expressions of victimhood and collective memory Contributors take note of differing aspects of memorial culture such as those embedded in war memorials mass grave sites and exhibitions as well as journalistic literary and visual forms of commemorations to investigate how narratives of memory can give meaning and form to places of trauma The Breitmann Ballads Charles Godfrey Leland, The ballad Breitmann's Going to Church is based on a real occurrence A certain colonel with his men did really during the war go to a church in or near Nashville and as the saying is kicked up the devil and broke things to such an extent that a serious reprimand from the colonel's superior officer was the result The fact is guaranteed by Mr Leland who heard the offender complain of the cruel and heartless stretch of military authority As regards the firing into the guerilla ball room it took place near Murfreesboro on the night of Feb 10 or 11 1865 and on the next day Mr Leland was at a house where one of the wounded lay On the same night a Federal picket was shot dead near Lavergne and the next night a detachment of cavalry was sent off from General Van Cleve's quarters the officer in command coming in while the author was talking with the general for final orders They rode twenty miles that night attacked a body of guerillas captured a number and brought back prisoners early next day The same day Mr Leland with a small cavalry escort and a few friends went out into the country during which ride one or two curious incidents occurred illustrating the extraordinary fidelity of the blacks to Federal soldiers The explanation of the poem entitled The First Edition of Breitmann is as follows It was not long after the war that a friend of the writer's to whom the Breitmann Ballads had been sent in MSS and who had frequently urged the former to have them published resolved to secure at least a small private edition though at his own expense Unfortunately the printers quarrelled about the MSS and as the writer understood the entire concern broke up in a row in consequence And in fact when we reflect on the amount of fierce attack and recrimination we reflect this unpretending and peaceful little volume elicited after the appearance of the fifth English edition and the injury which it sustained from garbled and falsified editions in not less than three unauthorised reprints it would really seem as if this first edition which died a boring had been typical of the stormy path to which the
