Technology and the Gendering of Music Education Victoria Armstrong,2016-03-09 Critical of technologically determinist assumptions underpinning current educational policy Victoria Armstrong argues that this growing technicism has grave implications for the music classroom where composition is often synonymous with the music technology suite The use of computers and associated compositional software in music education is frequently decontextualized from cultural and social relationships thereby ignoring the fact that new technologies are used and developed within existing social spaces that are always already delineated along gender lines Armstrong suggests these gender technology relations have a profound effect on the ways adolescents compose music as well as how gendered identities in the technologized music classroom are constructed Drawing together perspectives from the sociology of science and technology studies STS and the sociology of music Armstrong examines the gendered processes and practices that contribute to how students learn about technology the repertoire of teacher and student talk its effect on student confidence and the issue of male control of technological knowledge Even though girls and female teachers have technological knowledge and skill the continuing material and symbolic associations of technology with men and masculinity contribute to the perception of women as less able and less interested in all things technological In light of the fact that music technology is now central to many music making practices across all sectors of education from primary secondary through to higher education this book provides a timely critical analysis that powerfully demonstrates why the relationship between gender and music technology should remain an important empirical consideration Gender as a Verb Annette Fitzsimons, 2017-11-22 This title was first published in 2002 Aiming to contribute to feminist theory in the area of paid employment this volume demonstrates how the meanings attached to gender can form part of the explanation for the persistence of gender segregation at work The author applies the Foucaultian concept of discourse to occupational segregation to offer a new approach to the study of gender segregation An analysis is provided of gender in relation to computer programming

When IVF Fails K. Throsby, 2004-08-19 In spite of the fact that almost eighty percent of all IVF cycles are unsuccessful the dominant representations of the technology are of its success Based on extensive interviews with women and couples who have undergone IVF unsuccessfully and who have since stopped treatment and taking an overtly feminist approach the book explores the ways in which IVF failure is experienced and accounted for The book argues that IVF failure and the end of treatment have to be carefully managed over time in order to construct the self as normal in the profoundly gendered context of reproductive normativity Treatment failure is identified in the book not only as a central but largely excluded aspect of the experience of IVF but also of a proliferating range of new more controversial reproductive and genetic technologies
