Special Economic Zones Thomas Farole, Gokhan Akinci, 2011-08-01. For countries as diverse as China and Mauritius, Special Economic Zones (SEZs) have been a powerful tool to attract foreign investment, promote export-oriented growth, and generate employment for many others. The results have been less than encouraging. While the benefits and limitations of zones will no doubt continue to be debated, what is clear is that policymakers are increasingly attracted to them as an instrument of trade, investment, industrial, and spatial policy. Since the mid-1980s, the number of newly established zones has grown rapidly in almost all regions, with dramatic growth in developing countries. In parallel with this growth and in the evolving context of global trade and investment, zones are also undergoing significant change in both their form and function, with traditional export processing zones (EPZs) increasingly giving way to larger and more flexible SEZ models. This new context will bring significant opportunities for developing countries to take advantage of SEZs but will also raise new challenges to their successful design and implementation. This volume aims to contribute to a better understanding of the role and practice of SEZs in developing countries in order to better equip policymakers in making effective decisions in planning and implementing SEZ programs. It covers some of the emerging issues and challenges in SEZs, including upgrading, regional integration, WTO compliance, innovation, the environment, and gender issues, with practical case examples from SEZ programs in developing countries.

Value Chains Intan Suwandi, 2019-08-22. Award-winning book showcasing case studies uncovering the exploitation of labor and class in the Global South. Winner of the 2018 Paul M. Sweezy Paul A. understanding the situation of workers elsewhere and offers possible solutions for promoting and ensuring workers rights that have relevance far beyond Ecuador

Working Gendered Boundaries Anja Rudnick, 2025-10-01 This study explores the short term migration of Bangladeshi women to Malaysia to work in labour intensive export oriented factories and considers the consequences of their decision to migrate While international migration is a much discussed issue so far little attention has been given to the vast flow of South to South migration which is particularly large in Asia The labour migration flows within this region are typified by their highly regulated nature temporary character and by the predominance of females undertaking migration So far most academic attention has focused on permanent or settlement migration This study aims to fill a gap in our understanding of migration theory by focusing on temporary migration processes The study examines the reasons Bangladeshi women gave for migrating and how their experience impacted their lives during their migration and after their return The findings underscore the importance of incorporating gender in migration theory and integrating it into analyses While in most cases their migration was socio culturally contested the women say they migrated in an effort to improve their socio economic standing This proved in general to be more difficult than anticipated wages were not paid according to contract or labour law and male peers often opposed their efforts The complex nature of these women's position and situation preclude unequivocal conclusions as to the possible benefits or losses resulting from migration But by revealing the experiences of individual women this study helps to clarify some of the ambiguities of the individual migrants complex reality The analysis of their experiences exposes important gender dynamics
