Epidemics Sarah Dry, Melissa Leach, 2010-09-23 Recent disease events such as SARS H1N1 and avian influenza and haemorrhagic fevers have focussed policy and public concern as never before on epidemics and so called emerging infectious diseases Understanding and responding to these often unpredictable events have become major challenges for local national and international bodies All too often responses can become restricted by implicit assumptions about who or what is to blame that may not capture the dynamics and uncertainties at play in the multi scale interactions of people animals and microbes As a result policies intended to forestall epidemics may fail and may even further threaten health livelihoods and human rights The book takes a unique approach by focusing on how different policy makers scientists and local populations construct alternative narratives accounts of the causes and appropriate responses to outbreaks about epidemics at the global national and local level The contrast between emergency oriented top down responses to what are perceived as potentially global outbreaks and longer term approaches to diseases such as AIDS which may now be considered endemic is highlighted Case studies on avian influenza SARS obesity H1N1 influenza HIV AIDS tuberculosis and haemorrhagic fevers cover a broad historical geographical and biological range As this book explores it is often the most vulnerable members of a population the poor the social excluded and the already ill who are likely to suffer most from epidemic diseases At the same time they may be less likely to benefit from responses that may be designed from a global perspective that neglects social ecological and political conditions on the ground This book aims to bring the focus back to these marginal populations to reveal the often unintended consequences of current policy responses to epidemics Important implications emerge for how epidemics are thought about and represented for how surveillance and response is designed and for whose knowledge and perspectives should be included Published in association with the Economic and Social Research Council ESRC World Health Statistics 2006 World Health Organization, 2006 World Health Statistics 2006 presents the most recent statistics since 1997 of 50 health indicators for WHO's 192 Member States This second edition includes an expanded set of statistics with a particular focus on equity between and within countries It also introduces a section with 10 highlights in global health statistics for the past year This book has been collated from publications and databases of WHO s technical programmes and regional offices The core set of indicators was selected on the basis of relevance for global health availability and quality of data and accuracy and comparability of estimates The statistics for the indicators are based on an interactive process of data collection compilation quality assessment and estimation between WHO technical programmes and its Member States In this process WHO strives to maximize accessibility accuracy comparability and transparency of country health statistics In addition to national statistics this publication presents statistics on the distribution of selected health outcomes and interventions within countries disaggregated by gender age urban rural setting wealth assets and educational level Such statistics are primarily derived from the analysis of household surveys and are only available for a limited number of countries

HIV, Resurgent Infections and Population Change in Africa Michel Caraël, Judith Glynn, 2008-08-12 Forty years ago the age old battle against infectious diseases as a major threat to human health was believed close to being won However by the late twentieth century the increase of emerging and reemerging infectious diseases was evident in both low and high income countries About 30 new infectious diseases have been identified in the last 20 years Among the new diseases and most importantly the Human Immunodeficiency Virus HIV epidemic with 40 million persons infected and 25 million deaths since its first description presents one of the most significant health societal and security challenges facing the global community The interaction of HIV AIDS with tuberculosis malaria and bacterial infections have increased HIV related morbidity and mortality and in turn the HIV pandemic has brought about devastating increases in tuberculosis Understanding the population impact and the dynamics of infection diseases in the most affected region is critical to efforts to reduce the morbidity and mortality of such infections and for decisions on where to use limited resources in the fight against infections This book aims to contribute to these efforts by offering a demographic and epidemiological perspective on emerging and reemerging infections in sub Saharan Africa

Infection and Hearing Impairment Valerie E. Newton, Pamela J. Vallely, 2006-06-14 The aim of the book is to provide a text which brings together the expertise from two separate disciplines applied to a shared problem that of hearing impairment resulting from an infectious cause The book has been written to be accessible to both disciplines It begins with chapters describing the anatomy and function of the ear and its development to allow those unfamiliar with the ear to understand how the pathogen can affect hearing The following chapters include background information on the relevant viruses bacteria and other pathogens so that those less familiar with these organisms will be able to understand the context within which they may affect the ear The book also considers current ways in which these infections may be diagnosed treated and the potential for prevention

The Population Biology of Tuberculosis Christopher Dye, 2015-07-07 Despite decades of developments in immunization and drug therapy tuberculosis remains among the leading causes of human mortality and no country has successfully eradicated the disease

Reenvisioning tuberculosis from the perspective of population biology this book examines why the disease is so persistent and what must be done to fight it Treating tuberculosis and its human hosts as dynamic interacting populations Christopher Dye seeks new answers to key questions by drawing on demography ecology epidemiology evolution and population genetics Dye uses simple mathematical models to investigate how cases and deaths could be reduced and how interventions could lead to TB elimination Dye s analysis reveals a striking gap between the actual and potential impact of current interventions especially drug treatment and he suggests placing more emphasis on early case detection and the treatment of active or incipient tuberculosis He argues that the response to disappointingly slow rates of disease decline is not to abandon long established principles of chemotherapy but to implement them with greater vigor Summarizing epidemiological insights from population biology Dye stresses the need to take a more inclusive view of the factors that affect disease including characteristics of the pathogen individuals and populations health care systems and physical and social environments In broadening the horizons of TB research The Population Biology of Tuberculosis demonstrates what must be done to prevent control and defeat this global threat in the twenty first century
