Comercio justo, globalización y medio ambiente Gonzalo Ramírez Cleves, Erli Margarita Marín, 2013-01-01 Desde que el proceso de liberalización de la economía se ha incrementado con la llamada globalización económica los índices de pobreza y de desigualdad en el mundo han aumentado también El crecimiento de la economía y la generación de riqueza no han llevado como preveían los economistas a un mejor reparto Según los informes del PNUD 2006 cada año mueren 18 millones de personas por causas relacionadas con la pobreza como las enfermedades endémicas las malas condiciones de salubridad y el hambre es decir unas 5 000 personas diarias que incluyen a más de 34 000 niños menores de cinco años Del mismo modo la desigualdad en la repartición de los recursos genera la llamada sociedad 20-80 es decir que el 20% de la humanidad dispone de la riqueza y de los recursos del planeta mientras que el 80% restante vive en condiciones de pobreza y miserias Igualmente se ha cuestionado el modelo de globalización económica por problemas relacionados con el medio ambiente y el desarrollo sostenible ya que países industrializados con alta producción de gases de efecto invernadero como Estados Unidos China y Rusia rechazan la firma de tratados medioambientales que limiten restrinjan o encarezcan su producción Concomitantemente se ha hablado de depredación ambiental en los países en vías de desarrollo con la explotación de los llamados commodities o bienes primarios recursos naturales y minerales así como bosques y plantas que no se encuentran suficientemente protegidos jurídicamente y donde muchas veces los intereses económicos llevan a que se flexibilice o adecue la legislación de los países más vulnerables económicamente para de este modo favorecer los intereses del mercado
