

We're celebrating our birthday!

Dear reader,

Welcome to this birthday issue of the ChemSkills newsletter, which regularly updates you on the latest developments of the project.

This month, the ChemSkills project turns one year old! In September 2023, the consortium met for the first time and held its kick-off meeting in Brussels. This month, on its first anniversary, we had the great pleasure of reconvening in Serbia at the University of Novi Sad. It was a great opportunity to celebrate one more on the roadmap to address and meet the skills needs of the chemical industry. Over the past year, we have witnessed some of our ambitious plans slowly come to life.

This friendly meeting allowed project partners to share their visions, share methodologies and exchange best practices. Without any doubt, the highlight of the event was the public conference, featuring valuable contributions from 'between companies', as well as from different EU Member States' perspectives. Project partners also shared insights into the progress already achieved in the framework of the ChemSkills initiative.

Invited talks in the University of Novi Sad for the excellent organisation and the warm welcome, as well as to all participants – both in-person and online – for their interest and support of our project.

Enjoy the reading and stay tuned for more updates and exciting developments of this journey towards a greener and more digital future for the chemical industry!

The ChemSkills' project management team

The ChemSkills Public Conference

Conference, held at the University of Novi Sad, brought together experts from across Europe to address the pressing skills gap in the chemical industry. The event focused on the green and digital skills, which are crucial for the future of the industry.

Over 100 people across Europe, it was a great opportunity to share best practices and exchange ideas. The ChemSkills project aims to bridge this skills gap by the end of 2024. The project has achieved key milestones, including the development of a skills framework and conducting surveys to identify the most pressing skills needs.

For the industry's future. Companies are increasingly investing in digital skills, data analysis, and green technologies. Workforce development is an important tool for updating the current skills of the workforce.

Small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) are also investing in digital skills, but a successful partnership with universities is essential for developing training materials and promoting research in chemical engineering. A focus on STEM education, gender equality, and a chemical workforce is well-aligned to the industry's needs.

The close cooperation between the chemical industry and academia is key for a sustainable and competitive future.
