Unpicking Gender Dr Jutta Schwarzkopf, 2013-06-28 The Lancashire cotton industry doubtless counts among the most thoroughly researched industries in Britain Cotton processing has attracted attention both as the pioneer of industrialization and the harbinger of industrial decline in many ways typifying the development of the British economy from unchallenged global leader to the demise of large sectors of its manufacturing industry Yet among the spate of books and articles published about the industry there is a conspicuous lacuna Gender though rarely addressed specifically permeates the industry's historiography nonetheless This study tackles head on the notion of gender within the cotton industry during the period 1880-1914 not so much to trace its effects on the industry itself but instead concentrating on the ways gender radicalized particularly the female workers in the Lancashire mills In so doing it promotes the view that it was women weavers' experience of the way in which gender inequality in the labour process clashed with varying degrees of inequality in the other spheres of their lives that caused many of them to organize for the franchise Their experience of equality in the labour process both sensitized them to inequality elsewhere and empowered them to fight against it by showing it to be a product of society rather than nature Drawing on the examples provided by disenfranchised working class men and middle class women alike they accounted for inequality in terms of their exclusion from the polity In the process of holding their own against male co-workers, supervisory staff, employers, labour activists, politicians and even many middle class women they evolved their own version of working class femininity which differed in important ways from the female domesticity that had a vibrant existence in labour rhetoric but rarely beyond

Gender as Love Felipe do Vale, 2023-11-21 Christianity Today 2025 Award of Merit Academic Theology A theologically sophisticated take on contentious contemporary debates about gender Christianity Today In recent years the issue of gender has become a topic of great importance and has generated discussion from the kitchen table to the academy. It is an issue that churches and Christian educational institutions are grappling with as well since gender is a crucial aspect of identity affecting how we engage socially and understand our embodiment. Upstream from all these conversations lies a more basic question: What is gender? In Gender as Love, Felipe do Vale takes a theological approach to understanding gender, employing both biblical exegesis and historical theology and emphasizing the role human love plays in shaping our identities. He engages with and explains current theories and debates but his approach is unique in that it avoids the present impasse between social constructionist and biological essentialist paradigms. His emphasis is on love as identity forming. This fresh holistic approach makes an important contribution to the literature and will benefit scholars and students alike. Foreword by Beth Felker Jones

The Gender Factory S.F. Berk, 2012-12-06

tion addressed by this analysis centers on the reciprocal relation between 1 household domestic and market work efforts. It should be obvious by now that this chapter is not concerned explicitly with the contributions of individual members to household or market activity nor does it examine the mechanisms by which work tasks or time is apportioned among them. To reiterate, households per se are the unit of analysis; the division of labor within with respect to either household or market activities is ignored. In this chapter one must pretend that the social relations within the household productive unit which critically shape both the nature of work and its allocation are hidden from view. To return to the earlier metaphor, households establish a total household pie made up of all the market and domestic chores that they will undertake and the time required for them. Only after that pie is created can it be sliced and the pieces doled out to individual members.

2 The household and market pie defined and described here can be roughly conceptualized as the total productive capacity of the household or as the result of a pooling of individual talents and resources. Indeed, were a measure of the time available for leisure incorporated into the measure of the pie, the household's full income budget constraint, i.e. the total productive potential of the household could be described.
