taboo but still with tears rushed General's troupe to eastern Chongqing for the defense. General Chen without hesitation charged his troop alone deep in enemy territory, fought fiercely against the Communist army, suppressed the revolt, and provided the essential security for Chiang Kai-shek's departure from the airport and escorted the central government retreat from Chongqing. Afterwards, General Chen led his remaining army, breaking through enemy's encircling and joined the battle of Chengdu. Eventually, the entire Hu Zongnan army was defeated in Qionglai. Then General Chen summoned his officers and soldiers for a farewell speech and declared a lonely army could not overturn the outcome but your bravery already registered in history. Road of continuing allegiance is broken but the avenue of fulfilling filial piety is wide open. This speech was widely spread among the armies of both Nationalist and Communist. After the 1st Corp entered Sichuan, the corp was pursued and attacked along the way by the 2nd and 3rd Field Communist forces but the corp fought fiercely and succeeded in joining with other Hu Zongnan's troops in Chengdu. Although the whole Hu's army was finally defeated, they managed to contain the Communist from sending troops to Taiwan. During the Cultural Revolution, Mao Zedong admitted that the Communist army was unable to gather the 2nd and 3rd Field Armies in time to liberate Taiwan due to Hu Zongnan army's continued resistance which gave Chiang Kai-shek time to consolidate effective defence in Taiwan. This eventually led to the economic take off and success which were enjoyed by all the military and civilians in Taiwan. General Chen died in Chongqing in 1952 and was buried in the Fotuguan Park but his death only began to be known in 1976. During the Cultural Revolution, his stepmother who raised him in the hometown died because of the struggle with home village people. In Wuxi, his handicapped brother-in-law, a tailor, was sentenced to counter-revolutionary prison and his mother-in-law starved to death in bed without the care of her relatives. General's family was flown by Hu Zongnan to Taipei from Chengdu.
