Global Economic Prospects And The Developing Countries 1996:

Effects of Globalization on Developing Countries World Bank, 1996 Abstract This year's study focuses on the effects of globalization on developing countries and the growing divide between fast and slow integrating economies. The pace of global economic integration continues to accelerate dramatically. In the ten years from 1985 to 1994 the ratio of world trade to GDP rose three times faster than during the previous decade. During this same ten year period foreign direct investment (FDI) doubled as a share of global GDP. Developing countries also participated extensively in the acceleration of global integration. A closer look however reveals sharp disparities between countries. Though developing countries in the aggregate kept pace with the world rate of trade integration the ratio of trade to GDP actually fell in some 44 out of 93 developing countries in the last ten years. There were similar disparities in the distribution of FDI: two thirds of total FDI went to just eight developing countries; half received little or none. This trend is likely to continue. Projections indicate that trade and investment will accelerate in those countries which open up to the global economy and stay stagnant in those that do not. At the same time there has never been a better time for developing countries to integrate. Projected generally favorable conditions in the global economy including stable energy prices, low interest rates and inflation and improved communications and transportation technology have created an environment conducive to market liberalization. Moreover traditional obstacles to developing country integration such as high tariff barriers are falling rapidly. Many developing countries in every part of the world have successfully pursued policies of greater openness to the global economy and there is much to learn from their experience. The report documents the evidence, provides case study analyses and makes recommendations about best practice approaches to market liberalization especially in the areas of trade and commodities. For many developing countries successful globalization depends on fundamental economic reform requiring difficult policy decisions that often lead to real short term dislocation. These costs must be acknowledged from the outset and the effects carefully taken into account in the design of the programs. But the costs are manageable. In fact openness to external trade and investment is often the necessary first step to solid sustainable economic development.

Global Economic Prospects World Bank, 2007 Global Economic Prospects 2007 explores the short medium and long term outlook for the global economy and the implications for developing countries and poverty reduction. This year's edition examines how the international community in managing the process of integration will shape the world of 2030.

Global Economic Prospects 2003, 2003 The 13th edition of this annual publication focuses on the global and national dimensions of the investment climate for developing countries that is the policy and institutional environment that fosters entrepreneurship and productive investment. Issues discussed include the effects of current developments in the world economy ways that the international community can help foster economic growth and reduce poverty levels the need for sound national policies particularly to encourage competition in order for developing countries to reap the benefits of globalisation and the potential for a new World Trade Organization agreement on investment and competition

World Economic Outlook, May 1997 International Monetary Fund. Research Dept.,1997-05-15 This paper presents an outlook for the world economy for 1997 The paper highlights that the world economic growth quickened during 1996 following widespread deceleration of activity in 1995 Economic and financial conditions are generally propitious for the global expansion to continue in 1997 and the medium term at rates at least matching those seen during the past three years The paper underscores that in many countries structural reforms are enhancing the role of market forces and thereby strengthening the basis for sustained robust growth

A Study of World Trade Organisation K.R. Gupta,2008

World Economic Outlook International Monetary Fund,1997-10-15 This paper presents an outlook for the world economy for 1997 98 With world output expected to expand by some 4 1/4 percent in both 1997 and 1998 the strongest pace in a decade the global economy is enjoying the fourth episode of relatively rapid growth since the early 1970s The expansion is underpinned by continued solid growth with low inflation in the United States and the United Kingdom a strengthening recovery in Canada a broadening of recovery across continental western Europe notwithstanding persistent weakness in domestic demand in some of the largest countries

Global Capital Supply and Demand Zia Qureshi,1996-01-01 Annotation This report examines the possibility that global demand for capital will tend to outstrip supply thus putting upward pressure on global real interest rates The paper discusses the demand for foreign capital in developing countries the effect of this demand on savings in industrial countries and net capital flows from industrial to developing countries The analysis of trends over the next 10 to 15 years suggests that a large rise in international real interest rates is unlikely as long as fiscal consolidation in industrial countries remains on track

World Economic Outlook -- Interim Assessment, December 1997 International Monetary Fund,1998-01-27 The economic and financial crisis that erupted in southeast Asia in July 1997 had continued to deepen and broaden as of December and spillover effects from investor deteriorating confidence in emerging market economies were being felt throughout the global financial system This special Interim Assessment of the World Economic Outlook revises regional and global economic projections made by the IMF staff as published in the October 1997 issue in light of the crisis charts the buildup to the crisis and its onset and evolution assesses effects on the advanced economies and on private financing for developing countries and raises policy issues that the crisis has posed

Commodity Prices and Development Roman Grynberg,Samantha Newton,2007-11-01 More than 50 developing countries depend on three or fewer commodities for more than half of their exports and in fact many rely on a single commodity for a large share of export earnings This reliance inevitably exposes countries to the risk of export earnings instability as a result of price shocks and perhaps even more significantly the falling purchasing power of exports over the long run due to declining real prices Presenting for the first time a complete analysis of the issues surrounding commodity prices and development this book is the culmination of three years of research commissioned by the Commonwealth Secretariat to look at various aspects of commodity prices The problems faced by commodity dependent developing countries are formidable Although diversification is the most appropriate response to the problem of the secular decline in commodity prices long term transformation in the economy can be a slow process and its success will depend on a host of factors such as the development of human resources institutional capacity building poverty alleviation and appropriate domestic policy and environment By granting increased aid flows and debt relief and providing assistance to encourage production of non traditional export items the international community can play a proactive role in the development of the commodity dependent poor countries Only concerted efforts both at the domestic fronts of these countries and via co operation extended by the international community can help mitigate the problems of the world s most vulnerable economies World
