Cities in Transition Rita Schneider-Sliwa, 2006-01-23 This book was written with the aim of showing that even in the era of globalization developments appearing in cities are not subject to almost unconditional global forces Rather universal forces are decisive eventualities in the process of urban restructuring often influencing its course and speed yet developments and particularities within a city strongly influence the course of events and the extent to which negative characteristics of globalization might occur Berlin Brussels Hanoi Ho Chi Minh City Hong Kong Jerusalem Johannesburg Moscow St Petersburg Sarajevo and Vienna Using these important cities the special relationship between global and local regional forces is analyzed The case studies were selected based on their political and cultural context and the fact that their social and political fabric was subject to major changes in the recent past How global processes manifest themselves locally depends to a great extent on how development processes and endogenic potentials are initiated locally in order to cope with the new global economic and societal conditions

Living the Global City John Eade,1996 Governance and the City Frannie Léautier,2005 The authors contribute to the field of urban governance and globalization through an empirically based exploration of determinants of the performance of cities They construct a preliminary worldwide database for cities containing variables and indicators of globalization at the country and city level city governance city performance access and quality of infrastructure service delivery as well as other relevant city characteristics This city database encompassing hundreds of cities worldwide integrates existing data with new data gathered for this research The findings suggest that good governance and globalization at both the country and city level do matter for city level performance in terms of access and quality of delivery of infrastructure services The authors also find that globalization and good city governance are significantly related with each other Furthermore the evidence suggests that there are complex interactions between technology choices governance and city performance as well as evidence of a nonlinear U shaped relationship between city size and performance challenging the view that very large cities necessarily exhibit lower performance and pointing instead to potential agglomeration economies The framework also suggests a way of bridging two seemingly competing strands of the literature namely viewing the city as a place or as an outcome The authors conclude by pointing to the need for expanding the database and the econometric framework and suggest research directions and policy implications emerging from this initial investigation on governance and the city World Bank web site Global Urban Analysis Peter James Taylor,2011 First Published in 2010 Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis an informa company Global Metropolitan John Rennie-Short,2013-01-11 The force of globalization is making cities change all around the world Short s study explores how the discourse of globalization has become a major narrative in the restructuring of cities in many parts of the world

Global City-Regions Allen J. Scott, 2001-01-25 There are now more than three hundred city regions around the world with populations greater than one million These city regions are expanding vigorously and they present many new and deep challenges to researchers and policy makers in both the more developed and less developed parts of the world The processes of global economic integration and accelerated urban growth make traditional planning and policy strategies in these regions increasingly inadequate while more effective approaches remain largely in various stages of hypothesis and experimentation Global City Regions represents a multifaceted effort to deal with the many different issues raised by these developments It seeks at once to define the question of global city regions and to describe the internal and external dynamics that shape them it proposes a theorization of global city regions based on their economic and political responses to intensifying levels of globalization and it offers a number of policy insights into the severe social problems that confront global city regions as they come face to face with an economically and politically neoliberal world At a moment when globalization is increasingly subject to critical scrutiny in many different quarters this book provides a timely overview of its effects on urban and regional development one of its most important but perhaps least understood corollaries The book also offers a series of nuanced visions of alternative possible futures

World City Network Peter Taylor, Ben Derudder, 2015-08-17 With the advent of multinational corporations the traditional urban service function has gone global In order to provide services to globalizing corporate clients the offices of major financial and business service firms across the world have generated networks of work It is the myriad of flows between office towers in different metropolitan centres that has produced a world city network Taylor and Derudder's unique and illuminating book provides both an update and a substantial revision of the first edition that was published in 2004 It provides a comprehensive and systematic description and analysis of the world city network as the skeleton upon which contemporary globalization has been built Through an analysis of the intra company flows of 175 leading global service firms across 526 cities in 2012 this book assesses cities in terms of their overall network connectivity the regional configurations they form and their changing position in the period 2000-12 Results are used to reflect on cities and city state relations in the context of the global ecological and economic crisis Written by two of the foremost authorities on the subject this book provides a much needed mapping of the connecting relationships between world cities and will be a valuable resource for students of urban studies geography sociology and planning

World City Network Peter J. Taylor, 2004 Peter Taylor's compelling insights challenge us to view cities as part of a global network divorced from the constraints of national or even regional boundaries The Urban Now John R. Short, 2023-10-06 Drawing upon over a quarter of a century's worth of research The Urban Now illuminates our present urban condition John Rennie Short captures the main features of this moment of urban significance investigating the city as a crucial arena strategically located between global flows and national surfaces International Handbook of Globalization and World Cities Ben Derudder, 2012-02-01 This Handbook offers an unrivalled overview of current research into how globalization is affecting the external relations and internal structures of major cities in the world By treating cities at a global scale it focuses on the stretching of urban functions beyond specific place locations without losing sight of the multiple divisions in contemporary world cities The book firmly bases city networks in their historical context critically discusses contemporary concepts and key empirical measures and analyses major issues relating to world city infrastructures economies governance and divisions The variety of urban outcomes in contemporary globalization is explored through detailed case studies Edited by leading scholars of the Globalization and World Cities GaWC Research Network and written by over 60 experts in the field the Handbook is a unique resource for students researchers and academics in urban and globalization studies as well as for city professionals in planning and policy Globalization and the City Collectif, 2016-09-29 The world today is far less a global village than a global city as global network of multidimensional urban spaces of congestion prominently forming and also formed by globalization But the relevance of cities is nothing but new They were essential for culture and civilization worldwide they allowed a centralization of power and knowledge and they were crucial for the division of labor and for the organization of mass demand Further as places of intense and continuous interactions cities are the locations par excellence for global history to take place Thus there is a need to study the history of cities in connection with the history of globalization from this perspective This book is dedicated to contribute to the still underdeveloped but growing literature connecting the history of cities worldwide and their relation to global processes The authors do so from various disciplinary backgrounds and by referring to different times and places We visit ancient Alexandria nineteenth century Zanzibar and modern day São Paulo among others and we view these cities not only in their globality but also through their heritage their economic relevance their architecture or financial flows connecting them Further the book also contains systematic considerations about global city especially the general role of cities in development cities in global history teaching and cities relationships to global commodity chains
