Globalization Americanization And British Muslim Identity:

Globalization, Americanization and British Muslim Identity Saied Reza Ameli, 2002 A study of the impact of globalization upon the construction of Muslim identity in the West in particular in Britain Drawing on a number of theoretical models it examines the way in which globalization generates paradoxically two parallel processes homogenization and heterogenization The former process is chiefly characterized by increasing Westernization while the latter is observable in the different forms that growing Islamic resistance has taken in Muslim societies worldwide By examining second generation young adults born in the UK of migrant Muslim parents and the extent to which the Western global cultural industry has influenced their identity the study suggests that through the process of heterogenization cultural forms have become diversified and fragmented and identify common construction is diffused Muslim Diaspora in Britain Sabah Khan, 2024-03-13 This book explores the idea of Muslim diaspora in context of Muslim communities in the United Kingdom It critically looks at the notion of ummah and presents a comprehensive account of South Asian Muslims in London Employing qualitative research methods and drawing on extensive fieldwork it delves into the identification and transnational connections of Muslims in Britain It shows the ways in which religious identity practices and experiences may instigate diasporas focusing on South Asian Muslims in London Indian Pakistani and Bangladeshi Muslims who account for 3 6 per cent of the total population Further the inter as well as intra group dynamics and studies how Muslims of different ethnic background settled in the same geo political context engage with the notion of ummah The volume will be of great interest to scholars and researchers of religion especially Islam politics British studies and South Asian studies Muslims in Britain Peter Hopkins, 2009-03-31 Following the events of 11th September 2001 in the USA and more especially the bombings on the London underground on 7th July 2005 and the incident at Glasgow Airport on 30th June 2007 an increasing amount of public attention has been focused upon Muslims in Britain Against the backdrop of this debate this book sets out a series of innovative insights into the everyday lives of Muslims living in contemporary Britain in an attempt to move beyond prevalent stereotypes concerning what it means to be Muslim Combining original empirical research with theoretical interventions this collection offers a range of reflections on how Muslims in Britain negotiate their everyday lives manage experiences of racism and exclusion and develop local networks and global connections. The authors explore a broad range of themes including gender relations educational and economic issues migration and mobility religion and politics racism and Islamophobia and the construction and contestation of Muslim identities Threaded through the treatment of these themes is a unifying concern with the ways in which geography matters to how Muslims negotiate their daily experiences as well as their racialised gendered and religious identities Above all attention is focused upon the role of the home and local community the influence of the economy and the nation and the power of transnational connections and mobilities in the everyday lives of Muslims in Britain Includes contributions from Louise Archer Yahya Birt Sophie Bowlby Claire Dwyer families to leave home what challenges they faced in adjusting to their new lives and how they came to view their place in society Interviews with community leaders social justice organizations and with academics and political experts in each of the countries add additional layers of insight to how broad political issues like nationalist conflict immigration reform and antiterrorism strategies affect the lives of Muslims who have migrated in search of economic stability and personal happiness Although recent thinking about immigration policy in the United States and Europe emphasizes the importance of long term integration a global attitude that continues to sensationalize divisions between Muslim and other communities thwarts this possibility Integration cannot occur with policy solutions alone people must feel that they belong to a larger society Whether read as simple stories or broader narratives the voices in this revealing book are among the many speaking against generalization prejudice and fear that has so far surrounded Muslims living in the West
