Guardians of the Valley Edward J. Cashin, 2023-02-06 The first comprehensive history of the Lower Chickasaws in the Savannah River Valley Edward J Cashin the preeminent historian of colonial Georgia history offers an account of the Lower Chickasaws who settled on the Savannah River near Augusta in the early eighteenth century and remained an integral part of the region until the American Revolution Fierce allies to the English settlers the Chickasaws served as trading partners loyal protectors and diplomatic representatives to other southeastern tribes In the absence of their benevolence the English settlements would not have developed as rapidly or securely in the Savannah River Valley Aided by his unique access to the modern Chickasaw Nation Cashin has woven together details on the eastern Chickasaws from diverse source materials to create this cohesive narrative set against the shifting backdrop of the southern frontier The Chickasaws offered primary allegiance to South Carolina and Georgia at different times in their history but always served as a link in ongoing trade between Charleston and the Chickasaw homeland in what is now Mississippi By recounting the political social and military interactions between the native peoples and settlers Cashin introduces readers to a colorful cast of Chickasaw leaders including Squirrel King the Doctor and Mingo Stoby each an important component to a story that has until now gone untold

Cashin, 2007-02-04 In Travels the celebrated 1791 account of the Old Southwest William Bartram recorded the natural world he saw around him but rather incredibly omitted any reference to the epochal events of the American Revolution Edward J Cashin places Bartram in the context of his times and explains his conspicuous avoidance of people places and events embroiled in revolutionary fervor Cashin suggests that while Bartram documented the natural world for plant collector John Fothergill he wrote Travels for an entirely different audience Convinced that Providence directed events for the betterment of mankind and that the Constitutional Convention would produce a political model for the rest of the world Bartram offered Travels as a means of shaping the new country Cashin illuminates the convictions that motivated Bartram that if Americans lived in communion with nature heeded the moral law and treated the people of the interior with respect then America would be blessed with greatness Informed Power Alejandra Dubcovsky, 2016-04-04 Informed Power maps the intricate intersecting channels of information exchange in the early American South exploring how people in the colonial world came into possession of vital knowledge in a region that lacked a regular mail system or a printing press until the 1730s Challenging the notion of early colonial America as an uninformed backwater Alejandra Dubcovsky uncovers the ingenious ways its inhabitants acquired timely news through largely oral networks Information circulated through the region via spies scouts traders missionaries and other ad hoc couriers and by encounters of sheer chance with hunting parties shipwrecked sailors captured soldiers or fugitive slaves For many content was often inseparable from the paths taken and the alliances involved in acquiring it The different and innovative ways that Indians Africans and Europeans struggled to make sense of their world created communication networks that linked together peoples who otherwise shared no consensus of the physical and political boundaries shaping their lives Exchanging information was not simply about having the most up to date news or the quickest messenger It was a way of establishing and maintaining relationships of articulating values and enforcing priorities a process inextricably tied to the region's social and geopolitical realities At the heart of Dubcovsky's study are important lessons about the nexus of information and power in the early American South
