Balkan, 2012-12-06. Why this book? Other than the fact that I like writing about computers more than just about anything else this book fills several real needs. No matter how many manuals a computer manufacturer puts out to accompany a system and some of Epson America's are very good not everything can be covered. This book fills in the gaps. This book is unbiased having been written independently of Epson. So I won't be telling you to drop everything and run out to buy an HX 20. The HX 20 is good for some uses not so good for some others. This book is a guide to get out of the machine and/or pointing you towards a different getting the most machine that might better suit your needs. At the start of this project I had to decide who was my target audience novices experts or those in between. Because HX 20 owners and prospective owners don't fall into neat categories I tried to cover all the bases. Or at least as many as possible. As with any attempt to do everything I didn't always succeed. But I did succeed in providing at least something for everyone. For those who haven't yet bought a portable or are unsure if buying an HX 20 was the right move there are descriptions of 20 other portables on the market. For those who have used other computers before there's information on how Epson BASIC differs from other BASICs with tips on converting programs.

Domain-Specific Program Generation Christian Lengauer, Don Batory, Charles Consel, Martin Odersky, 2004-11-18

Program generation holds the promise of helping to bridge the gap between application level problem solutions and efficient implementations at the level of today's source programs as written in C or Java. Thus program generation can substantially contribute to reducing production cost and time to market in future software production while improving the quality and stability of the product. This book is about domain specific program generation; it is the outcome of a Dagstuhl seminar on the topic held in March 2003. After an introductory preface by the volume editors, the 18 carefully reviewed revised full papers presented are organized into topical sections on surveys of domain specific programming technologies, domain specific programming languages, tool support for program generation, domain specific techniques for program optimization.
