Found Longterm Gains From Early Intervention:

Found-long Term Gains Bernard Brown,2019-03-08 Since the founding of Project Head Start in 1965 there has been intense public as well as academic debate about the effectiveness of early intervention programs in producing lasting gains in children s intellectual development In the past few years new evidence has accumulated at a rapid pace and there are now over 100 major studies of longitudinal experiments and Head Start program evaluations A series of longitudinal studies of early intervention experiments was begun in the 1960s The children who participated in these programs are now past the third grade and old enough to give reliable responses to IQ and achievement tests In addition they have now been in school long enough to allow examination of their overall school performance This volume includes reports which review both center and house based early intervention programs One of the papers presents preliminary findings from the Developmental Continuity Consortium which is pooling the data from 12 major longitudinal experiments The authors cite evidence for late developing gains which seem permanent These sleeper effects were not manifest in the scores of the same groups of children in the first few years of the postintervention period In addition to IQ and achievement gains there is also evidence for gains in emotional adjustment Early intervention appears to have dramatic effects in the assignment of children to special education classes and on retention in grade somehow enabling them to maintain their position in the classroom In all the papers describe 96 major studies which report positive impacts from early intervention programs Oversight hearing on the Head Start program United States. Congress. House. Committee on Education and Labor. Subcommittee on Human Resources,1982 Handbook of Early Childhood Intervention Jack P. Shonkoff,Samuel J. Meisels,2000-05-22 Eighteen new chapters have been added to the 2000 edition of this valuable Handbook which serves as a core text for students and experienced professionals who are interested in the health and well being of young children It serves as a comprehensive reference for graduate students advanced trainees service providers and policy makers in such diverse fields as child care early childhood education child health and early intervention programs for children with developmental disabilities and children in high risk environments This book will be of interest to a broad range of disciplines including psychology child development early childhood education social work pediatrics nursing child psychiatry physical and occupational therapy speech and language pathology and social policy A scholarly overview of the underlying knowledge base and practice of early childhood intervention it is unique in its balance between breadth and depth and its integration of the multiple dimensions of the field Parents as Educators Keith J. Topping,2025-08-05 Modern practice in the 1980s was to involve parents increasingly in the education of their children and was supported by legislation Particularly when children had special needs parents required structured training and support to ensure they affectively sustained their vital role as educators at home Many large scale programmes to provide this had been developed throughout the world at the time for example Home Start Portage Home Visiting Projects and Paired Reading Projects However not all of these had been thoroughly evaluated and the existing literature was scattered and difficult to access Some projects demonstrated spectacular results and high cost effectiveness while others proved more disappointing Originally published in 1986 this book critically analyses over 600 international English language research reports on the effectiveness of parent training programmes In addition a detailed guide to the practicalities of planning projects is provided together with a comprehensive directory of useful resource materials After an introductory overview the evidence on the effects on child progress of parental involvement in school activities is reviewed as is research on the impact of schemes of regular structured communication between home and school Programmes designed to train parents to accelerate the development of their children at home are considered in the subsequent chapters starting with ordinary children Much of the book reviews projects targeted on children with some sort of special educational need from children whose special needs stem from a widespread difficulty such as poverty or second language learning systematically through to children whose needs stem from rarer and more severe issues Each chapter has its own summary for ease of reader use while an overall summary chapter points out best buys and directions for future developments This volume will be of major interest to teachers psychologists social workers community health personnel community educationalists researchers many others working with parents and children and to some parents themselves This book is a re issue originally published in 1986 The language used is a reflection of its era and no offence is meant by the Publishers to any reader by this re publication structural reforms Scotland is the ideal case study the recent devolution of government in the United Kingdom offers a natural experiment in political economy one whose lessons apply to almost any small advanced economy One fundamental conclusion is that policy can make a big difference to long term prosperity in small economies open to flows of knowledge investment and migrants Indeed the difficulty in introducing growth oriented policies lies more in the politics of implementing change than in the theoretical diagnosis Public sector governance is consequently a key issue in creating a pro growth consensus And faster growth must be seen to improve opportunities for the population as a whole Further setting out the evidence as this book does for Scotland is vital to overcoming entrenched institutional barriers to policy reform The first chapter is by Jo Armstrong John McLaren and the editors and the subsequent chapters are by Paul Krugman William Baumol Edward Glaeser Paul Hallwood and Ronald MacDonald James Heckman and Dimitriy Masterov Heather Joshi and Robert Wright Nicholas Crafts and John Bradley
