

Ten Years of Adult Literacy Policy and Practice in Canada: Literacy Policy Tensions and Workarounds

SUZANNE SMYTHE
Simon Fraser University

Abstract

The years 2003 – 2013 marked a coming-of-age in the adult literacy field in Canada, as it reconciled the politics of international literacy surveys and their accountability regimes with the actualities of literacy work among people caught in the nets of neoliberal economics. The concepts of policy networks, powerful literacies and workarounds are used to capture how educators attempt to escape or repair the effects of standardized accountability regimes to create new networks of adult literacy practice that reflect local learning needs and interests. The nexus of this struggle suggests consequences for the work of all educators within an emerging ‘new precariat’ and downgrading of public education spaces.

Introduction

There is growing recognition among literacy educators and scholars who work in contexts as diverse as schools, communities and post-secondary adult learning programs that global education policy discourses are finding their way into their settings, shaping ‘what counts’ as literacy in instruction as well as how literacies will be assessed and programs and educators made accountable (Ball, 2012a; Hamilton, 2014). Understanding the construction of these policies, how they travel and their consequences for democratic access to learning, constitutes a promising new terrain for inter-sectoral literacy research. It is in the spirit of cultivating these conversations that I describe adult literacy policy and practice in Canada from 2003 – 2013. The time frame captures the rise and intensification of regimes of international adult literacy measurement, as well as accountability and curricular frameworks that define what counts as literacy, its purposes and ‘whom is worthy of investment’ (Ball, 2012b) in educational programs. These policies do not unfold in a vacuum; adult literacy educators and organizations are significant actors in adult literacy policy networks (Hamilton, 2014), engaging at times in strategic alignment with national and international governing bodies, but also in creative forms of resistance, forging new spaces for innovation and educational inclusion.

The goals of this paper are to explore the policy texts and discourses that shape the work of adult literacy educators in Canada, from the perspective of the author who has participated in these policy discourses as a literacy educator and researcher. While some of the policy discourses and texts presented in this paper cover well-traveled terrain for adult literacy educators, the goal is to consider these in light of the present moment, its uncertainties, and the possibilities for new conversations about literacy research, practice and social action. In addition, educators in other sectors may recognize similar policy developments in their own settings, thus opening conversations about the workings

Corrigan, Cathy Bunting, Justin Dillon, Alister Jones, Richard Gunstone, 2015-09-01 This volume considers the future of science learning what is being learned and how it is being learned in formal and informal contexts for science education To do this the book explores major contemporary shifts in the forms of science that could or should be learned in the next 20 years what forms of learning of that science should occur and how that learning happens including from the perspective of learners In particular this volume addresses shifts in the forms of science that are researched and taught post school emerging sciences new sciences that are new integrations futures science and increases in the complexity and multidisciplinary of science including a multidisciplinary that embraces ways of knowing beyond science A central aspect of this in terms of the future of learning science is the urgent need to engage students including their non cognitive affective dimensions both for an educated citizenry and for a productive response to the ubiquitous concerns about future demand for science based professionals Another central issue is the actual impact of ICT on science learning and teaching including shifts in how students use mobile technology to learn science Issues in African Education A. Abdi, A. Cleghorn, 2005-11-04 This book addresses major sociological issues in sub Saharan African education today Its fourteen contributors present a thoroughly African world view within a sociology of education theoretical framework allowing the reader to see where that theory is relevant to the African context and where it is not Several of the chapters bring a much needed cultural nuance and critical theoretical perspective to the issues at hand The sixteen chapters thus aim to be of interest internationally to those who work in such fields as social and political foundations of comparative and international education and development studies including university professors teacher educators researchers school teachers tertiary education students consultants and policy makers On the Problem of Foundation Skills and the Futures of Work Garry Argent, Peter Kelly, 2025-03-27 This book provides an analysis of how global capitalism digital disruption and new worlds of work have reshaped ideas about language literacy and numeracy foundation skills in a neoliberal foundation skills apparatus in Australia since the 1980s The book uses Michel Foucault's genealogical approach to producing critical histories of our present. From this perspective it examines how these disruptions have transformed what was once a voluntary not-for-profit community movement of education for migrants and marginalised people into a sophisticated government community and for-profit training and skills sector which imagines foundation skills learners as choice-making consumers. The RoutledgeFalmer Reader in Science Education John Gilbert, 2004. This Reader brings together a wide range of material to present an international perspective on topical issues in science education today. In order to identify what themes should be addressed in the book, thirty-eight science educators from around the world responded to the question: What issues are currently important in science education in your country? The outcome is this lively and authoritative Reader which features topics as varied as globalisation, assessment, pupils' views on science education, environmental education, teaching approaches, teacher development, multimedia and ICT, constructivism. With a specially written introduction from the editor providing a much-needed context to the current education climate, students of science education will find this Reader an important route map to further reading and understanding. Potter and Perry's Canadian Fundamentals of Nursing - E-Book Barbara J.

Astle, Wendy Duggleby, Patricia A. Potter, Anne G. Perry, Patricia A. Stockert, Amy Hall, 2023-02-15. Get the solid foundation you need to practise nursing in Canada. Potter Perry's Canadian Fundamentals of Nursing 7th Edition covers the nursing concepts, knowledge, research, and skills that are essential to professional nursing practice in Canada. The text's full-colour, easy-to-use approach addresses the entire scope of nursing care, reflecting Canadian standards, culture, and the latest in evidence-informed care. New to this edition are real-life case studies and a new chapter on practical nursing in Canada. Based on Potter Perry's respected Fundamentals text and adapted and edited by a team of Canadian nursing experts led by Barbara J. Astle and Wendy Duggleby, this book ensures that you understand Canada's health care system and health care issues as well as national nursing practice guidelines. More than 50 nursing skills are presented in a clear two-column format that includes steps and rationales to help you learn how and why each skill is performed. The five-step nursing process provides a consistent framework for care and is demonstrated in more than 20 care plans. Nursing care plans help you understand the relationship between assessment findings and nursing diagnoses, the identification of goals and outcomes, the selection of interventions, and the process for evaluating care. Planning sections help nurses plan and prioritize care by emphasizing Goals and Outcomes, Setting Priorities, and Teamwork and Collaboration. More than 20 concept maps show care planning for clients with multiple nursing diagnoses. UNIQUE Critical Thinking Model in each clinical chapter shows you how to apply the nursing process and critical thinking to provide the best care for patients. UNIQUE Critical Thinking Exercises help you to apply essential content. Coverage of interprofessional collaboration includes a focus on patient-centered care, Indigenous peoples' health, referencing the Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC) Report, the CNA Code of Ethics, and Medical Assistance in Dying (MAID) legislation.
